Milburn House Buffalo Sept 8—After 5 o'clock there was a period of comparatly quiet about the Milburn house. The members of the cabinet and other distinguished officials who had been coming and going through out the day now withdrew as it was understood that no further bulletin would be issued until 9 p m. As the twilight deepened into darkness the lights appeared in the upper chambers of the Milburn house and the eyes of the watchers outside were turned with anxious interest to those shimmering tokens of life watch s about the sick room. All through the day great crowds thronged the streets watching the Milburn house. But as darkness came they gradually disappeared. A steady line of men and women came up to the ropes to make anxious inquiries. Shortly before 8 o'clock Vice President Roosevelt accompanied by Mr Wilcox of Buffalo called at the Milburn residence and remained for a short time in conversation with Secretary Cortelyou and those near the president. There was little additional information to give them beyond the 4 o'clock bulletin and they came away with the same hopeful and confident expressions as those earlier in the day.

NDON VIEWS OF ANARCHIST CRIMES

Sept 8—The Sunday ju

has had a great deal more about anarchists than the public which anarchical doctrines are preached and plots hatched. The members of such organizations stamp themselves as outlaws and the time has arrived when they should be treated as such. They are a source of terrible danger to the community and should no longer be tolerated.

—The Observer says:

It is gratifying at least to see the universal sympathy the crime has evoked for the victim. The whole world is kin today alike in horror at the act and in compassion for the American president and the American people. This at may be out of evil good will come and the nations be drawn into closer bonds of sympathy.

The future course of the market depends mainly upon the amount that the United States needs.

During the past week stocks were very quiet and quotations were uninteresting. Home railway securities were quiet at fractional improvements and Americans were irregular and changes were mostly adverse. The dealings in foreign securities are few and on all but mines on the contrary showed some animation.

West Australians improved decidedly on the elimination of the Whittaker Wright interest. There was considerable continental inquiry in this department. Judging from the August returns of West Austral an gold exports [illegible] More favorable south Africa [illegible] also helped Rand shares while De Beers have risen 1 1-16 on continental buying. American inquiries and confidence that the coronation ceremonies of King Edward will increase the demand for diamonds. The talk of a 10 per cent diamond war tax is apparently without foundation but there is some apprehension locally owing to a report that Americans are preparing to corner the the coronation supply.

PUBLIC WILL BE FULLY INFORMED

Buffalo N Y Sept 8—The public will be kept fully advised of the actual condition of the president. Each bulletin will be prepared and will be a full statement of the features of the case at the hour it is issued. The people are entitled to the facts and shall have them.

(Signed) George B Cortelyou
Secretary to the President.

[illegible] statement is intended to put at rest any fear that the official bulletins understate the condition and at the same time to give assurance that those will the president intend that the people shall have the facts.

ANXIETY IN MANILA

Manila Sept 8 Genuine anxiety is felt by everybody here regarding the condition of President McKinley. The first news of the attempted assassination was received through the Associated Press.

NEW YORK POLES DENOUNCE CZOLGOSZ

New York Sept 8—An indignation meeting attended by about 500 Poles of which it is estimated that there are 80 000 in New York city was held today at the Church of St Stanilaus and bitter words of denunciation of Czolgosz and his crime were uttered while the expression of sympathy for the president at the meeting to him was warm and universal. Doubt as to the nationality of the would be assassin was expressed and it was decided [illegible] and Toledo at once to look into his ancestry and to prove to the American people that he is not a Pole but a Russian by descent. That delegate will leave New York for the west tomorrow.

PHILADELPHIA POLES

Philadelphia Sept 8—Four hundred Polish Americans gathered in Saint Laurentius Roman Catholic church today passed resolutions deploring the shooting of President McKinley and protested against the statements that the would be assassin was connected with the Polish people in this country. Among those present were five Polish priests. The resolutions after reciting the attempted murder continue as follows:

Resolved That we as Roman Catholic Polish citizens of the United States protest most energetically against the insinuations of the English newspaper as if the anarchist who raised his sacrilegious hand against the highest authority of the great republic had any connection with the Polish people residing in these states. The would be assassin is a Hebrew by birth but professes to be an agnostic or an atheist. The Polish nation can boast of never having produced a man who would stain its reputation by attacking a lawful authority because imbued by Christian principles. It is well aware that all lawful authority comes from God and that it must be respected.

Separate telegrams of sympathy were sent to both the president and Mrs McKinley. Seventeen Polish American societies it is claimed were represented at the meeting.

CHICAGO PULPITS DENOUNCE ANARCHY

Chicago Sept 8—In every pulpit in Chicago today denunciation of anarchy and its followers was the theme of the morning sermon. The indignation and horror of the people at the attempt on the president's life was to have frozen even Christian charity for the prayers for the speedy recovery of the chief executive were followed by the stirring demands in sermons that anarchy be stamped out so effectually that not a vestige be left.

At the First Baptist church Rev P S Henson excoriated the men who sought with the assassin's knife or bullet to remedy wrongs. In tears But a few moments before the clergyman was pleading fervently that the president's life might be spared the great congregation was immovable when he raised his clinched hands to heaven and declared that anarchists should be driven like dogs from hole to hole deprived of free speech and hunted down like wild beasts.

At Oak Park the First Congregational church was crowded when Rev W P Barton began his sermon. He said that anarchism by the nature of their beliefs should not be regarded as citizens of the United States but that they should be looked upon as foes and treated as such. In all other churches the clergymen preached along the same lines. In no place of worship was heard a single word in extenuation of the would be assassin's act. In every [illegible] be even was the rule.

REBELS ACTIVE AT PANAMA AND COLON

Kingston Jamaica Sept 8—The Royal Mail steamer Para from Colon reports rebel activity in the neighborhood of Panama and Colon. She also reports that fighting has taken place at Bocas Del Toro. The government of the latter place failing to repulse the Liberals the rebels have given notice of their intention to attack Colon with in a fortnight. The government is continually moving troops to meet the rebel advances. Trade continues almost paralyzed.

DESTRUCTIVE FOREST FIRES

St John N B Sept 8—Forest fires are ravaging the country and threaten several large lumber districts. Twenty-three houses have been destroyed in the settlement of White Bay and it is feared that other villages have also been burned. It is impossible to cope with the fires and unless a heavy rain fall extinguishes them the loss to the timber interests will be heavy.

WATCHERS SEE HOPEFUL SIGNS

No Indications of Peritonitis Have Appeared and Confidence Grows Stronger.

PATIENT SLEPT FOUR HOURS

Secretary Cortelyou Says the Public Will Be Kept Fully Informed of Every Feature of the Case--Members of Cabinet and Vice President Remain Near at Hand.

Milburn House Buffalo Sept 9—1 0 a. m—No additional bulletin has been issued by the president's physicians and none is expected after 8 o'clock a. m. The condition of the president is reported as unchanged.

Buffalo Sept 8—The following bulletin was issued by the president's physicians at 9 p m:

The president is resting comfortably and there is no special change since last bulletin. Pulse 130 temperature 101 6 respiration 30.

Milburn House Buffalo Sept. 9—Abner McKinley brother of the president reached here at 12 20 a m. He was admitted to the house at once.

Buffalo N Y Sept 8—Through this quiet peaceful Sunday every word that came from the big ironclad house in Delaware avenue in which the stricken chief magistrate of the nation lies battling for life was reassuring and tonight the chances of his recovery are so greatly improved that all of those who have kept the patient vigil at his bedside feel strongly that his life will be spared.

The developments of last night and today were dreaded but hour after hour passed and the distinguished patient struggling there beneath the watchful eyes of physicians and trained nurses showed no unfavorable signs. Five times during the day the doctors and surgeons assembled for consultation and each time the verdict was unanimous that every change that had occurred as [illegible] slightest premonitory symptom of peritonitis appeared and the fresh hope born with the morning grew stronger and stronger as the day advanced until toward evening the confidence expressed in the president's recovery seemed almost too sanguine.

Dr Charles McBurney the famous New York surgeon who had been summoned in consultation after a thorough examination in which he said he had found not a single unfavorable symptom joined in the last afternoon bulletin which declared that the president's condition was satisfactory. It is not strange therefore that the vice president the members of the cabinet and other distinguished visitors who called came away with lightened hearts and buoyant tread and gave expression to the most optimistic sentiments.

The encouraging news spread over the exposition city with great rapidity and thousands came in carriages in street cars and afoot to learn for themselves of the faith and confidence that existed about the Milburn house. The brightness of the day with its cool bracing atmosphere added to the general cheerfulness and when a score of newsboys darted into the crowd about 6 o'clock shouting "Extra" The President will live." It was with difficulty that they could suppress the shouts of thanksgiving that rose in their throats. And the newspapermen many of whom have been at their posts for 48 hours continuously remained steadfastly throughout the day in the little white walled tents across the streets from the house where the country's [illegible] and [illegible] those inside. He and Secretary Gage Secretary Hitchcock and Attorney General Knox called together about noon and indeed there was no time during the day when some member of the cabinet was not in the house where his stricken chief lay. Even those most prominent in public life did not see him as the doctors would not relax the ironclad rule they have laid down to prevent the least drain upon his energies and vitality. Those who came and went moved silently and recently receiving the latest statements from the doctors and departing.

All of the members of the cabinet are now here except Secretaries Hay and Long. The former telegraphed today that he would start from Newbury to morrow and will probably be here to morrow night. Secretary Long telegraphed that he was coming but did not specify the time. The cabinet officers feel it to be their duty to be here in this crisis to meet any emergency. They are holding no formal meetings although there are some matters of public business which they daily discuss and the most possible contingencies should the president grow worse are also thoroughly canvassed. They do not believe that there is the most remote possibility that Vice President Roosevelt will be called upon to exercise the functions of chief magistrate under the disability clause of the Constitution while the president lives.

Vice President Roosevelt will not [illegible] such a course. Still in the event of grave complications and emergency it might become necessary and the question has arisen in the minds as to who should proclaim the disability provided for by the Constitution. That instrument is silent on the subject.

There is no precedent to follow. During the protracted illness of President Garfield before his death Vice President Arthur was not called upon to act. The consensus of opinion among the members of the cabinet is that should the occasion arise they themselves would have to decide and proclaim the existence of the disability. The supreme court they say could not do so as there would be no case in which the question could be raised before that tribunal.

The members of the cabinet are making their headquarters at the Buffalo club and there they interchange their opinions. They are to remain here for the present and plans of departure are indefinite and not even thought of while the president is not entirely out of danger. If he should pass the danger point however they will return at once to Washington.

Vice President Roosevelt's attendance at the morning service of the First Presbyterian church gave occasion for a heartfelt expression of the sorrow universally felt over the calamity and the detestation of the assassin's methods. A fervent prayer by the pastor Dr Mitchell invoked the stern protection of anarchy and asked that the temples of public life be scourged of men willing to tamper with the madness of anarchy.

The interest in the president's condition is such across the Canadian border that the Associated Press was asked to furnish a bulletin this morning to be read in the churches in Quebec and Montreal and many requests of a similar character came direct to Secretary Cortelyou from different parts of the United States.

The messages of sympathy from all over the world have fairly overwhelmed Secretary Cortelyou. Two more White house stenographers have been sent for and upon their arrival perhaps tomorrow some of the important messages will be made public.

Almost every government in the world has been heard from most of the crowned heads of Europe sending personal messages. Among the latter are King Edward Emperor William, the kings of Portugal Italy and Sweden and the sultan of Turkey. President Loubet of the republic of France has also cabled his sympathy. One of the most touching messages thus far received was from Madame Labori the wife of Maitre Labori who defended Dreyfus in his famous trial at Rennes.

Mrs. McKinley continues to bear up bravely and her fortitude under the circumstances is regarded as remarkable. One of her dearest and closest friends Mrs. Rand of Washington has arrived here and will probably remain with her during this trying period.

Secretary Cortelyou in whose hands the management of everything seems to be was able to take some rest this morning for the first time since the tragedy. The great confidence which the president has in his secretary could not have been more strikingly illustrated than at the exposition hospital when he was about to be placed on the operating table.

The president realized the sooner the operation was performed the better and he was perfectly willing to submit to the knife. His only solicitude was as to the competency of the surgeons who were to perform the operation. Just before he was placed upon the table he called Secretary Cortelyou to him and asked whether the surgeons were all right. Mr Cortelyou assured him that he had made inquiries and that they were reputed to be among the most skillful in their profession. [illegible] he noted the assurance instantly and immediately announced that he was ready.

The members of the cabinet are doing everything in their power to prevent the sensational exploitation of Czolgosz, because he undoubtedly craves notoriety and because his fellow anarchists throughout the country love it. They do no desire to place any stone in the path of the authorities who are laboring to unravel the plot if any plot existed and all the machinery of the government secret service would be used to aid the state authorities in the prosecution of the investigation. But by the direct request of Secretary Root on behalf of his colleagues the district attorney and the police will not permit the prisoner to be seen or interviewed nor will they discuss the methods or the results of their efforts to discover the originators of the plot.

All that has leaked from the jail shows that the prisoner is vain and boastful of his crime and would if given an opportunity fill the newspapers with columns of his vaporings.

TARIFF SCHEDULE FOR PHILIPPINES

Manila, Sept 8.—The new tariff schedule arrived by the transport Kilpatrick. Copies will be issued to the public immediately for thorough study and discussion. The public desires the Philippines commission to hold open sessions [illegible] chants will be considered also the time when the tariff shall become effective.

The insurrecto leader Angeles has surrendered in the Camerines with 10 officers 42 men a number of rifles and a quantity of ammunition. Numbers of other small surrenders occur daily. The only active forces operating now with any number of men are those of Malvar and Lukban. The capture or surrender of the former is expected at any time. The latter the Filipinos believe will hold out as long as he is able to get ammunition. His only ammunition in Manila says Lukban will never surrender.

The commission has passed a law providing that in future appointments the appointee's contract with the United States shall provide penalties where the appointee shall resign within two years. These penalties shall include the loss of pay due and the recovery of money paid while in transit. It has frequently happened recently that persons appointed have quit their positions shortly after landing here.

Deputy Sheriff Thomas Malone of Portland Ore. was suspended from office for saying McKinley ought to have been shot long ago.

WASHINGTON PRESIDING ELDER SPEAKS FORCIBLY

Washington Sept 8. Rev H R Naylor presiding elder of the Washington conference conducted services in President McKinley's church this morning. During his sermon he said:

The exigencies of life are such that no man living can count upon the continuance of existence for any length of time. Among these exigencies are disease accident and the bullet of the assassin such as we have heard of in the past 48 hours. That evidence at Buffalo indicates that no man is safe from the shaft of death. It is very difficult to get away from it and while I have ever been loyal to the law and have ever contended for its strict enforcement I must say that the affair of 4 o'clock Friday has almost converted me into an advocate of lynch law. Certainly there was no occasion, no reason for that dreadful deed and whether the work of a sane man or a lunatic there can be no justification for it.

The above extract from the sermon of Dr H R Naylor presiding elder of the Washington district was the only direct reference made in the regular sermon preached today at the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal church which is the church President McKinley attends when in Washington. The sermon was brief and the service was converted into a gathering of sympathy for the president.

Of the several prayers all were supplications for the early restoration to health of the president of praise for his personality and admonition to Mrs McKinley to stand firm in this trying time. When the regular service had been concluded the congregation which was large transformed itself into a mass meeting and upon motion of Judge T H Anderson of the district court by a standing vote directed that the following expression of the sense of the congregation be sent to the president.

"The board of Methodist Episcopal churches and congregation assembled extend to you and your devoted wife the deepest sympathy and earnestly pray that God in his great mercy may comfort and sustain you and spare your valued and useful life to the church and nation."

The message was signed by all the members of the official board.

The adoption of this resolution was followed by remarks by several of the leading members of the church all filled with sentiments of the deepest regret for the Buffalo tragedy and highest praise for the president as a man and a member of their congregation. When the meeting finally adjourned the members of the congregation gathered about the altar, exchanging condolences and regrets. These expressions however were not entirely harmonious for mingled with the general conversation were remarks in deprecation of Naylor's reference to the summary punishment of the president's assailant. It was characterized, and condemned by some as open advocacy of lynch law. On the other hand there were many who took occasion to expression to Dr Naylor their complete indorsement of his position. He did not for a moment seem disposed to change his attitude. He said to those with whom he spoke:

"If I had been there I would have blown the scoundrel to atoms if I had had a pistol."

Dr Bristol the pastor of the church is in London attending the sessions of the ecumenical conference.

Among those who spoke in the congregational meeting were Judge Anderson Judge A D Lynch Rev J D Croissant and Dr Naylor. Judge Anderson spoke of the sorrow felt by the congregation, but deprecated any sentiment which would seem to lend influence to the summary and speedy punishment of the author of the attempt on the president's life. Notwithstanding the moral sense of the world had been aroused by the awful crime he was sure he said the law would be vindicated and the national sense of order and justice maintained. He felt as did others that if ever a crime had been committed which deserved summary punishment this one did but he still contended for orderly conduct and a maintenance of equipoise.

Judge Lynch and Mr Croissant eulogized the president in very high terms the former saying that he stood second alone to the Creator. Dr Croissant saw the finger of God in the tragedy. God, he said, has something to do in this matter. Something will be accomplished through the assassin's bullet. If the crime results in the abolition of anarchy on American soil our beloved president will not have been shot in vain. This sentiment was greeted with great applause as were several others in the same vein by this speaker.

Mr Naylor in his address in the meeting did not repeat the sentiment which he had expressed in his sermon. He merely remarked in His later address that he was not surprised at the intensity of feeling on the part of the congregation for it was universal throughout the nation. He declared that Czolgosz had been born without conscience and that he was ready for any bloody thing that might turn up.

"But our mission" he said, "is not for the dead, but with the living. William McKinley is not dead nor will he die." (Applause.)

One of the leaders of the church in his prayer, asked for mercy for the assassin but he coupled his petition with the assertion that he was the smallest being that ever had been created and he expressed the opinion that if he did not find mercy in heaven he would never secure it on earth.

PRAYERS OFFERED IN NEW YORK FOR THE PRESIDENT

New York, Sept. 8.—Not a church service was held in New York city or its environs today at which prayers were not offered for the recovery of President McKinley. And coupled with these supplications was a strong undercurrent of thanksgiving that the [illegible] was of an encouraging character.

There was no concerted action in this matter by the churches other than that called forth by Mayor Van Wyck's proclamation of Saturday calling on the pastors of churches of all denominations to direct their services with special reference to the suffering president.

In the Protestant Episcopal churches almost without exception the full text of the Litany of general supplication was read and the name of President McKinley was inserted in the general prayer for the sick. In all the Roman Catholic churches a special uniform prayer was offered at every mass.

In the majority of the pulpits those occupying them took as their theme the attempt on the life of Mr McKinley and in almost every case some reference was made to the tragedy either in the person itself or in a prelude. In some instances demand was made for measures of suppression against the anarchistic propaganda which was generally held responsible for the deed of Czolgosz.

Tomorrow (Monday) will witness another session of prayer and pleading. In the afternoon the children of the public schools of this city and Brooklyn to the number of hundreds of thousands will follow the instructions of the president of the board of education and under the lead of their teachers will hold a special prayer for President McKinley.

At Old Trinity today Rev Alfred Griffin in addition to referring to Mr McKinley in the prayer for persons un[illegible] wife and this was the case in most of the churches. The keynote of the sermons may be gathered from these words used by Mr Griffin:

The whole nation aye the whole world today is watching at the bedside of a president whom it has learned to regard as just and true. We are under the shadow of a great anxiety overwhelmed by a great calamity. It is to God that the people turn at such a time. In Him lies the power and strength to heal the sick. May it be His will to restore to us our president in life and strength.

Rev Howard Agnew Johnson of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church in a sermon based on Gideon as an Israelitish leader, had this to say of Mr McKinley:

Thus he (Gideon) resembles our own great leaders Washington, Jefferson, Jackson Lincoln. Most conspicuous of all, and last, but not least William McKinley the man whose soul is now hovering between life and death the man whose name will go down to posterity identified with movement which has made our republic into an empire though still retaining the form of republican government.

Rev Hugh Black associate pastor of Free St. George's church Edinburgh, Scotland was in the pulpit of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church today. As a prelude to his sermon he said:

"I feel that I am called upon to express somewhat of your feelings and your sympathy and to lead your prayers for President McKinley who is the victim of such a dastardly crime. Though a stranger to your country it is easy for me to do this since it needs no local knowledge of policies but merely the expression of the universal heart of man. As for the deed itself the whole civilized world must pronounce abhorrence not only of the act but of the detestable principles which inspired it. Nowhere outside of America, moreover will sorrow be keener or prayer be more fervent than in Great Britain."

Preceding the prayer for the president at St. Patrick's cathedral, Father Dyer said:

As you are aware that a great calamity has befallen the nation during the last few days in an attempt on the life of its chief executive and as it is of vital importance that he should again be able to continue an administration which has brought so much of happiness and prosperity to this country your prayers are requested for his speedy restoration."

Father Ducey of St. Leos (Roman Catholic) in the course of extended remarks on the tragedy at Buffalo said:

God grant that the life of Mr McKinley may be spared and that he may be restored to health and strength to bring joy and comfort to his now afflicted family. I earnestly ask this congregation to pray fervently to God for his safe recovery.

ROYAL SYMPATHY

Milburn House Buffalo Sept. 8. Following are the messages from King Edward and Emperor William.

Kiel Sept. 7.

"President of the United States, Buffalo.

I am horrified beyond words at the dastardly attempt on your life. My best and warmest good wishes and most earnest hopes for your recovery.

"Edward."

"Koenigsburg Sept 6.

"To President, United States, Buffalo.

Deeply distressed by news of dastardly attempt on your life.—I express to you how I and the whole of the German people feel for you and the anguish through which your country has to pass. May the Lord grant you a sure and speedy recovery."

NEWS NOTES FROM DENVER

Edward F. Flaherty Arrested on Charge of Grand Larceny

UNITED MODERNS' SYMPATHY

Float Drawn by Automobiles in Festival Parade—Denver News on the Future

Denver Bureau
Colorado Springs Gazette.

Denver Sept 8—Edward F Flaherty manager of the shoe department of the Golden Eagle store has been arrested on the charge of grand larceny. Chief of Detectives Delaney says Flaherty has confessed to the theft of his employers out of $2,000 worth of goods. He used his position it is said to furnish shoes to L. Cohen of [illegible] Larimer street and Harold Cilbstun of [illegible] Larimer street. Both these men have been arrested charged with receiving stolen goods.

The following message was sent to the secretary of state at Washington today:

The Supreme Lodge United Moderns now in session at Denver Colo horrified at the attempt upon the life of the beloved president of the United States takes this way of [illegible] through you to his wife and family and to the nation at large its sense of horror at this great calamity and the striking down in the zenith of his glory the greatest living example of devotion to wife and home.

Signed, F. W. Smith
Supreme Recorder United Moderns.

A special from Alma Colo says that Frederic Shaw the gambler who was shot by Edward Kimball Friday morning died last evening. The coroner's inquest relieved Kimball of all blame saying the shooting was done in self defense.

One of the features of the Festival of Mountain and Plain will be a float drawn by automobiles [illegible] eight of the horseless carriages to pull the float through the streets.

In speaking of the future the News this morning said editorially:

Should President McKinley die, which may God direct otherwise, his exalted place would be acceptably filled by Vice President Roosevelt. There are those who fear because of the vice president's youth and what some estimate as his impetuous nature. But a review of Mr Roosevelt's public life whether as a member of the police board of New York, as assistant secretary of the navy, as colonel of the rough riders on the deadly slopes of San Juan hill, as governor of the Empire state or as vice president of the United States, proves that he has adapted himself with rare skill, discretion and courage to the duties and emergencies of the position. His descent from distinguished parentage, his liberal and scholastic education, his life in the great [illegible], his study of the world's history and his own historical writings all prove him far more than the ordinary man. They mark him a soldier, a statesman and a patriot.

We differ from Mr Roosevelt as to the wisdom of many public measures. If the majority of the American voters registered with the Democratic party we would prefer another man for president. But while the country stands by the Republican party at the ballot box if God in His inscrutable wisdom shall call hence President McKinley then the country has nothing to fear from Theodore Roosevelt and he will make a safe, an earnest and a patriotic American president.

Why not cast off [illegible] with which the great tragedy has covered the people. We sympathize with the wounded president, we pay tribute to his virtues, we execrate the fiend who struck him down but faith in our grand country, its free institutions and its great and glorious destiny is in no degree diminished.

GRAND JUNCTION

Public Schools Open Today Under Favorable Conditions—Carnegie Library Report.

(Special Correspondence.)

Grand Junction Sept 7—Monday morning next the public schools of this city begin the work of the coming school year. The enrollment of scholars will be the largest ever had. The teachers are all in the city and ready to begin the work. The assignments are as follows: W H Miller superintendent, A S Otto principal, F J Fisher mathematics and science, Marcia P. Waples language, C W Watson manual training, Frances Curtis eighth grade, Marian Hinds seventh grade, Mildred Garrett and Louetta Moore sixth grade, Iona Brosius and Lula Snyder fifth grade, Allie Rice, Iona Bull and Le[illegible] Watkins fourth grade, Nannie Forty and Frances Strock third grade, Eleanor Swift, Grace Bailey and Amanda McWheeters second grade, Ida Clark, Cora May Miller and Helen Dewey first grade. A number of the teachers are new but all are experienced and come highly recommended. The enrollment of pupils will be over 1,000.

The first monthly report of the new Carnegie public library from the librarian Mrs B. F. Jay makes a splendid showing. From July 26 to August 31 there were issued to borrowers 145 cards on which 505 books were loaned. There were 509 visitors to the reading room and as many more who came to look over and inspect the building. There were received as gifts during the month 114 volumes and by purchase 59 volumes. Mr W. E. Craven also donated $10 with which to purchase children's books. The reading room is well supplied with both daily and weekly newspapers as well as the leading magazines. All books are free to be used in the reading room and as it is well filled each evening the new institution is proving to be the best place in the city for the young people to go.

J. F. Lauer of San Jose Calif. wants to remove his large woolen mills to Grand Junction. His proposition is: He will take $5,000 in stock for himself and partners and wants the citizens of this [illegible] the stock, which will be in the neighborhood of that much more. The machinery [illegible] in the mill is all new and of the most approved pattern. Mr Lauer thinks Grand Junction is the ideal place for large woolen mills. A number of enthusiastic citizens are considering the offer and it is safe to state that the mill machinery will be removed to this city shortly.

Elks' Baseball Team Again Defeated the Woodmen of the World.

MINERS UNION ELECTION

Boy Accidentally Shot by Playmate—Fine Collector Suspended by Mayor Crane

Cripple Creek Bureau
Colorado Springs Gazette

Cripple Creek Sept 8—The Elks baseball team this afternoon at Union park again defeated the team made up of members of the Woodmen of the World by a score of 13 to 8. The score and result today is the same as that of last Sunday. Both teams were strengthened and it was a pitchers' battle throughout with honors even. The Woodmen lost the game in the seventh inning. With two men out and three men on bases Fisher the Woodmen's left fielder missed an easy fly, allowing two men to score.

Cripple Creek Miners union No 40 held its semi annual election last night and judging from the vote polled much interest was taken. The officers elected are as follows: President Geo D Hill, vice president Frank Hopkins, recording secretary W. E. Allen, financial secretary F. J. Campbell, treasurer A. [illegible] Allen, conductor Phillip Madron, warden B. B. James, finance committee Chas Prefel, D. A. McLoud and S. J. [illegible]

The 13 year old son of Wm Cody of Anaconda was accidentally shot last evening. The wound is not serious. Another youth with whom the Cody boy was playing was handling a revolver when in some manner the weapon exploded, the ball passing through the fleshy part of young Cody's arm above the elbow. Medical attendance was summoned and the wound dressed. Unless blood poisoning should ensue the boy will suffer comparatively little inconvenience from the injury.

Fine Collector Dick Carr has been suspended from office by Mayor Crane. The matter is now before the fire and police committee of the city council. The trouble grew out of the gambling question, the mayor being of the opinion that Carr did not testify sufficiently strong at the time of the gamblers' trial in police court Friday evening.

Arrivals at the National hotel were Chas Sprague, C. Dominick, J. C. Johnson, Mary Norder and Minnie Norder of Colorado Springs, F. M. Chambers and F. J. Eddie of Denver and R. J. Coryell of Detroit.

Joe Edlestein Charged With Stealing Wire.

INJURIES MAY BE FATAL

District Court Convenes Today—Large Docket—Judge Holly Dead—Mexicans Arrested

Pueblo Bureau.
Colorado Springs Gazette.

Pueblo Sept 8—Joe Edlestein, one of a quartet charged with stealing copper wire arrested by Detective Atkinson of Colorado Springs, Deputy Sheriff Skinner and Special Officer O'Leary of Pueblo was taken to Colorado Springs today by Atkinson where he will join Tuck Holland, Ray Peterson and Herman Kurtz in jail. Edlestein is said to have made a confession to the officers.

John Farrell who was run over by a Missouri Pacific train near Boone station yesterday afternoon will probably not live through the night. He is at the Pueblo hospital and is hourly growing weaker. He has been unconscious since he was struck by the train and only roused himself long enough to give his name. No information is obtainable as to where he came from. He is badly injured about the head and chest and his left arm and right leg are broken. He is a man of about 50 years and looks like a ranchman.

Tom Thompson is under arrest on a charge of being implicated in a forgery. It is said that Thompson recommended another man, who had alleged bogus checks of Tom Robinson, a saloon keeper.

The September term of the district court opens tomorrow morning with one of the largest criminal dockets for some time. Judge Vorbees of division A will have the criminal docket this time and Judge Dixon of division C will try the civil cases. There is but one murder case on the criminal docket, being that of William Campbell who killed Abe Allen last February. It is understood that Campbell now has local attorneys. At his first trial when the jury disagreed he was represented by Colorado Springs lawyers secured with money paid by the colored people of [illegible]

Ten members of the Rover Wheel Athletic club made a run to Boggs flats today where the operations of the Pueblo Oil Well company are going on.

Judge Holly an old and respected resident of Pueblo county died yesterday at an advanced age. Judge Holly's widow is the famous Clara Hyde Holly author of the age of consent law now on the statute books of Colorado and one of the first women to be elected to the legislature in the state.

Albodo Vielpendendo and Ed Dineas Mexicans were arrested in the Grove by Officer Thomas today for being drunk and creating a large disturbance. The first man was carrying a gun and claims to be a deputy sheriff of Las Animas county. Both men are from Trinidad.

Elks Work to Increase Membership—Boiler Works Being Enlarged

Special to the Gazette

Florence Sept 8—Florence lodge No 611 B. P. O. Elks is working to increase its membership and solicitors are now out working to secure a class of fifty new members. More than half this num[illegible] will continue working until the last of this month and the entire class of fifty or more will be adopted on the same night sometime in October, when the lodge will probably give a blow out. The addition will give the Elks a membership of over 150 and it was organized about a year ago.

The Star Boiler works are building an unusually large pattern shop opposite the immense boiler works and foundry. A short time ago the old pattern room was gutted by fire and several hundred dollars worth of patterns were destroyed.

The annual report of the county superintendent of schools of Fremont county has been completed. It is interesting to note the growth of the schools as shown by comparing the figures of former years. The school census shows a population of 5,196 pupils of school age of which [illegible] are between the ages of 6 and 14. The school population for 1899 showed 4,813 pupils of school age in the county or an increase of 383 for the two years. There are enrolled in the schools of the county a total of 4,947 pupils, 280 in high schools, [illegible] in graded schools and 590 in normal schools. In 1899 there was a total enrollment of [illegible], the increase being [illegible] for the two years. These figures indicate a steady and very satisfactory growth and are a sufficient warrant for the expenditures being made for new buildings and apparatus. The schools of the county were never in better condition than at present and the new year is entered upon with every reason for hopefulness. The city schools will reopen tomorrow with 100 new assignments. The school buildings will be crowded.

The manager of one of the local oil well supply houses has returned from Boulder where he had been looking the oil field over and he says that the quality of oil opened up there is the best that he has ever seen. While there he booked orders for five complete drilling outfits from as many companies which will drill in that district. He gives a glowing account of the conditions there and says that new companies are being formed, leases are being acquired and everything points to extensive operations in the Boulder fields. While in Boulder he secured a lease on ground for a warehouse and secured an office in the Masonic block, corner Main and Fourteenth streets. He will at once put up a branch store there to supply the demand for oil well supplies and the machinery is being loaded into the cars here [illegible] booked at Boulder.

Railway [illegible] are already being hauled for five additional derricks and they will be erected as fast as builders can put them up.

NEWS NOTES FROM VICTOR

Doyle Burns Case to Come Up at Council Bluffs

G. A. R. POST RESOLUTIONS

Construction of the New Opera House Proceeding With Satisfactory Speed

Victor Bureau,
Colorado Springs Gazette

Victor Sept 8—It is reported here tonight that the case of James Doyle against Jas F Burns involving over $1,000,000 worth of Portland G. M. Co. stock will be tried at Council Bluffs, Iowa, the latter part of the present month. It will be remembered that Doyle about two years ago secured judgment by default in this case in the sum of $100,000. This judgment and interest now amounts to more than $1,000,000.

Victor post No 100 G. A. R. has adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, The veil of sorrow now extending the length and breadth of the American continent caused by the unprovoked and cowardly assault by an assassin whose name is unworthy of mention upon the life of our beloved president, Comrade W. McKinley, [illegible]

"Resolved, That this post denounce in unspeakable terms the existence of any institution within the borders of our country that teaches hatred rather than love for the institutions of our government and especially where for its object it is to strike down by taking the life of the chief head of our nation be it

Resolved that our sympathy with one accord be and is hereby extended to Comrade McKinley and those of his cabinet together with all subordinates and especially to Mrs McKinley in this sad hour of sorrow.

The construction work on the new opera house is proceeding with satisfactory speed. Many carloads of rock are upon the ground and masons are at work upon the foundation. The foundation rock is trachyte from Bull cliffs and is brought to Victor over the Gold Belt line. Subscribers to stock are making payments and several new subscriptions have been received, among them two from Denver capitalists.

Special to the Gazette

Florence Sept 8—There was an exciting game of baseball between the Florence Eagles and the Gillett Giants played here this afternoon and the locals handed down defeat to the visitors by a score of fourteen to six. Pitcher McCluskey made an error by a wild throw to first letting in two men. The umpire was the assistant manager of the Gillett [illegible] decisions in their favor. Attendance 1000. Batteries Florence Shields, McCluskey; Giants—Graber, Knight. The visitors were the team that handed down defeat to the locals six weeks ago and the only team that has proved efficient enough to beat the locals this year. Another game will be played tomorrow.

MILLIONAIRES DROPPED TWO

Minneapolis Won a Double Header Yesterday.

BOTH WERE CLOSE GAMES

Long Hits Won the First—Ferguson's Pitching Saved the Second—Two More Today

Special to the Gazette

Minneapolis Minn Sept. 8—Twice this afternoon did the Miller aggregation jump onto the aching frames of the Willies and Proprietor Hulen continues in the dumps. Ira Belden and his stick and several other able assistant bat handlers are responsible for reporting the first game lost. Charles Ferguson's benders cost the Millionaires the second and chance to cheer up Mr Hulen.

The first game offered young Mr Roy Evans a chance to make a successful debut in Minneapolis but Evans passed McCredie the first man up and then clouts by Brashear and Law scored two. Swormstedt worked for the Millers and pitched a steady game. In the second he hit O'Connell and the big fellow got all the way round with the Willies' first score. In the eighth the Springs had a chance to win out. Tannehill started off with a double and O'Connell hit for a base. Swormstedt filled the paths by hitting Ream and then Breyette threw wild to the plate after fielding Hollingsworth's easy one, Tannehill and O'Connell scoring. Gaston was sent in to bat for Ramey and fanned. Evans was forced to do the same thing. Hulen was passed and the bases were filled again but Bandelin only hit to Swormstedt and the danger was over. The Willies went out fast in the ninth.

The second game started off a pitchers' battle, Gaston against Ferguson. Ferguson had his only bad time in the first, permitting two singles and two passes. The Millionaires filled the bases but with one run scored Ferguson pulled out of the whole. It was one, two, three out for the Millers until the fifth when Law started off with a three sacker. Cockman scored him with a single and then after McConnell had sacrificed Wadsworth hit for two bases. With two in the scoring stopped. In the eighth the Hulen band made its last stand. Hulen hit for two bases and went to third while Bandelin was being stopped. Holland walked and Hulen scored on Tannehill's long fly to right. Holland stole second and third and scored on Brashear's error. The Millers started the eighth with the Willies in the lead but Breyette hit for one, stole second and then after McCredie had walked Belden drove in the tieing score with a single. The Hulen crowd had a chance for a double on Brashear's easy one but the play went bad and that cost them the game for Law hit a drooping liner to shallow right and before Ramey got the ball back Brashear and McCredie scored. The Millionaires could do nothing in their part of the ninth. Cold disagreeable weather and a promise of rain kept the attendance down and made the afternoon uncomfortable for the fans. Two games will be played tomorrow afternoon. The scores:

CRIME SHOULD BE PUNISHED AS TREASON

Indianapolis, Sept. 8. An attempt on the president's life should be treated as treason says W. H. H. Miller, attorney general under President Harrison. "In my judgment," said Mr Miller, "the attempted assassination of the president again suggests that in forming our criminal laws we have paid too little attention to protection of the government. As a general rule the law takes no more account of an assault upon the president than upon a private citizen.

"If as all good people hope the president shall survive this attack the offense if the laws of New York are as I suppose they are it is simply an assault with intent to commit murder. It seems it should be so framed as to take into account the president's public character, in short that an attempt to take the life of the president should be deemed treason and punished accordingly."

AMBASSADOR WHITE GIVES OUT INTERVIEW

Berlin Sept. 8. The United States Ambassador Andrew D. White who was interviewed before his departure for Sassnitz said:

President McKinley's death would be a terrible loss at the time when he had marked out a policy for the United States calculated to complete magnificently his career. I knew him for many years and never heard him speak without being deeply impressed with his ability, patriotism and good will to all mankind. If there ever was a democrat, I use the words in their true sense, he was one. The only thing he had at heart was the welfare not of a person or of a class but of all the people. His conduct has been admirable. Regarding the Spanish war he tried earnestly to prevent it, but when he saw the people were determined to end the Cuban struggle he put himself at the head of the movement and brought it to a triumphant end.

United States Consul General F. H. Mason said:

If there was a head of a civilized nation who should have been protected by his kind and blameless life from assassination it was Mr McKinley. I knew him from childhood. We were both natives of Niles, Ohio. As a boy, soldier, lawyer and statesman the president has been generous, loyal and manly and incapable of a mean, cruel or dishonest thought or act.

JUDGE NOYES OF NOME.

Dr. W. L. Ellison, Colorado Springs' Successful Lung, Throat and Chronic Disease Specialist

Dr. Ellison treats consumption, asthma, bronchitis, hay fever, catarrh and the chronic diseases common to men, women and children, devoting his professional time exclusively to this class of practice. In every vocation specialty is known to be the ideal. This is notably true when life and health are at stake. It is then that the best medical service the profession affords should be procured. This can only be done when you stop to consult the physician who has attained professional skill by making investigations concerning the care and treatment of certain diseases. If you suffer from acute disease call your family physician. If you suffer from chronic disease consult Dr. Ellison. In the past three years nearly two thousand tubercular lung and throat cases have been under treatment by his attenuated sulphur with the lowest death rate on record. The sulphur treatment can be taken at your home. Examination free. Office 24 North Tejon street (over Craigue's grocery store). Office hours from 9 to 12, 2 to 5, to 8. Sundays, from 2 to 3.

But how lonely is his lot: "Thou art as a brazen wall against the ... laid against the kings of Judah, against the priests thereof and against the people thereof."

Is it strange that he cried out in sheer despair, Woe is me my mother thou hast borne me a man of strife and contention. Every one of them doth curse me.

Some men love to fight but in Jeremiah we have a man to whom the sound of battle was abhorrent who nevertheless had to fight constantly and not with the enemies of his country but with his own countrymen. Literally sobbing out his grief at the awful contradictions of his lot, he still fought on amid the hoots and curses of those he was trying to save.

Peace, peace, they cried to him but there was no peace until the stones of his infuriated countrymen gave him the final and infinite peace of the grave.

Such was the man—inwardly trembling, outwardly calm—who stood before Jehoiakim, king of Judah, and spoke these uncompromising words: "Woe unto him that buildeth his ... chambers by injustice. That saith I will build me a wide house and spacious chambers ceiled with cedar and painted with vermilion.

Thinkest thou that thou shalt reign because thou strivest to excel in cedar?"

A most potent question—one that ought to make anyone stop and think. Jeremiah asked the question to save his country and his king. He received as his reward a noisome prison cell.

Our Bible is the most instructive book in the world.

It has to do with the history, the hopes and the religious beliefs of an insignificant people of a distant age whose day of political splendor passed more quickly than a weaver's shuttle.

The language in which it was written was already dead in the days that Greek and Latin was still the language of the streets. And yet throughout the pages of this ancient book are to be found thoughts so noble, so wise, so true that our greatest modern minds bow before them in reverence and strive to obey.

Truth does not die. Its form may change but its spirit is unchangeable.

If Jeremiah standing with trembling knees before the ruler of his people spoke without faltering words of truth and soberness, those words are true and living yet.

Will it not be well for us to listen to those who have tones and see if they contain any message for us?

History may have turned again on its great circle bringing to us circumstances similar to those so long ago.

Is there anything in our time to which Jeremiah's words might speak in accents of warning?

Listen for a moment: might it not ... thou that thou shalt reign because thou strivest to excel in cedar?

And not to America but to us. America is only another way of saying You and I—for America is but You and I written large.

The other day I picked up a novel and read ... of it a few pages toward the end. I know nothing about it as a whole but in the place where I was reading I found that the author had combined in a rather powerful way two conversations so as to bring simultaneously before the reader two scenes in the life of one of our large cities. One showed a set of people sitting at a wastefully extravagant dinner, the other a poor woman and her child wandering starving through the streets. At the very moment the ladies rise from their dinner the doctor who had been bending over the fallen mother arose with the words: It's of no use, she has been dead some time, exhaustion from starvation.

People who say that the picture is fanciful are not well acquainted with the state of things in some of our large cities.

It is not that our poor lie starving in our streets that is a thing of rare occurrence but it is true that many of our working people have an almost impossible time to get along on the wages that are paid them.

Fortunately that is not true in this town and it must be a matter of self congratulation that we are all compelled to pay large enough sums to our employes to make our community one that is comparatively free from poverty ... remember that we have the luxury of sitting at our tables untroubled by the sight of hungry people standing outside our doors.

We may not be able to spend so much money on ourselves but it is passing out of our hands in a way better than the old system of charity.

But notice this, the credit is not with us. We only do what we are compelled to do. I call your attention to it as the brighter side of our local condition of which we are all apt at times to complain.

But leaving that let us note a tendency in our country in which we share. It is the habit of wasteful display and its companion evil indifference.

No one intimate with the different parts of our country can fail to have noticed the increased splendors of living. Witness the magnificent houses that are being built in various parts of the land. Houses beside which many of the palaces of Europe look small and insignificant.

If this tendency goes hand in hand with a feeling of indifference toward the poor, a shirking of the responsibility of wealth, it carries within itself its own ruin.

One of the most sober minded men that I know, an old man, said last year: "I sometimes think that you of this the younger generation will live to see the day when these great houses which we ... to the ... by a righteously indignant ... And if ... be ..."

... why should I be saying that ... to you a small number of people with moderate incomes? Is it that you ... I thank thee that I am not as other men are?

Not at all. It is because in your own way the people of Colorado Springs are sinners—above all them that dwell in Judah.

The outward form of expression which our sin takes is not identical with those of which I have been speaking but the sin lies just as deep and is just as sinful.

Let me explain. I think that the salvation of our country lies with those people who, looking up from their own concerns, are interested in the welfare of others. St. Paul said to a rich and luxurious community: Look not everyone on his own things but every one on the affairs of others, and his words are yet to find entrance to your ears.

Nothing is more encouraging than the growth of this interest in the east. Young men and young women are coming forward anxious to do something for the poor but larger. Religious they don't call themselves but they would like to know the true state of things. Do the poor really have so hard a time? Who is to blame? Can the ... anything to help? Here they are in this world; they would like to do something for their keep.

This question is forcing itself upon them. Is there any inherent reason why one person should be born to labor and another to rest? Is it that God loves one and hates the other? We know that this is not so. Why then should the woman, perhaps an old woman, stand all day ... work which is rightfully ours?

There is no answer except that she carries the burden that our shoulders may be free. Do we not then owe her something in return? That is the question the young people in the east are asking.

Can we live our lives in comfort, at peace with ourselves, while we do nothing to repay the immense debt under which we stand to the working, suffering portion of the community?

Now this is true. Your own brothers and sisters are asking questions such as these in the east but you have not yet begun to do it as you ought in this town.

You still have your eyes glued on yourselves, your families, your own concerns. Do you know why? Partly because of the evil effect of suffering. The old theory that illness and suffering comes from God for the good of men is contracted by everyday life. Illness, suffering brings but gold that lies already in the recesses of the character but they do not place it there. Of themselves they are apt to make people selfish, self-centered and irreligious and this town proves it.

Some of you have come out of this furnace of afflictions pure gold. Some of you have learned to see how poor you are and are striving for the true riches. Some of you are simply selfish, useless and everything that happens to you but tends to make you more so.

Now how does this show itself? By the light hearted way in which you push aside the questions: What shall I do for my keep? Taken as a whole this congregation has more leisure than most congregations in this country. Every member of it ought to say: ... my time or money toward paying off the debt which I owe to humanity.

We as a parish ought to say that, or we have no right to exist here. In ... and ... ought to do ... If some of the gentlemen here would agree to take one month a year in assisting in that most thankless task of seating the people we might make the church a door of hope to many a homesick stranger.

Do you know the appropriate name by which St. Stephen's is sometimes known? The Ice Box. Have you been to the Ice Box this morning? is sometimes asked. If we all felt that this church was our house and that it was our duty to welcome strangers to it with as cordial a look and as gracious a smile as you would to your own fireside, you would soon change that chilly reputation for a better. That I say to you in all earnestness.

But there is a deeper evidence that you have not awakened to a full sense of your responsibility to others. I might continue to speak of the church side of the question. I might tell you of the feeling of shame that I sometimes have when we sing Sunday after Sunday:

Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow over a scanty offering of $15 or $16. Truly ... at of them saith the Lord.

I might speak of how last winter some of you undertook work and how readily you dropped it again. You began well; who did hinder you? But I do not want to talk of those personal matters—it is true that most of you ought to give into the offertory $1.00 every Sunday, $2.00 a year. Even if you had to save a little to do it. It is also true that many of you gave up work because you had too much leisure, not too little, but those things I do not care to dwell on today. I want rather to call your attention to a peculiar feature in this town by which some of you show that you have not yet awakened truly to your sense of responsibility to others.

Some of you have asked me from time to time what do I consider the sin in gambling. I will be perfectly frank with you. To the man or woman who says: I have put aside so much money to spend on my pleasure and recreation. And part of that money I use to increase the pleasure of playing certain games of cards. Even as you use yours in some other form of amusement. I must say that to that question put in that way I see no answer. I cannot point to any inherent sin in such use of money. And yet I utterly condemn gambling. On what ground? This: As an abstract question of right and wrong there is no inner reason for condemning it, but as a practical question there is. You know that in this town you are playing with fire when you are playing for money. You know that you are playing with the aching and anxious hearts of some of the men and women in this town. You know that people who know the world say that there is no form ... dangerous as the craze for gambling. You know that it is the greatest evil of the mining camps about us. Therefore it is only because you refuse to look up from your little quiet game in your pleasant rooms that you fail to see the sin of your actions. It is only because you blind your eyes to the suffering of your fellow men that you can do what you do in peace.

Circumstances alter cases and the circumstances at present in the state of Colorado are absolutely against all forms of gambling whether big or little.

To my mind the sin that you are guilty of is the sin of indifference to the suffering and needs of others. You say: I am safe. I can afford it. I need fear no evil. All of which is probably true, but the best part of every community has passed far beyond that standard of right and wrong. Jesus has led the way and people have followed.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" was the heresy of Cain and we know that his condemnation was just.

Those who are indifferent to what is happening about them whether it is poverty or sin or putting a stumbling block in a brother's way are as guilty of selfishness as he who builds his house with unrighteousness and his chambers with deceit. And thinkest thou that such a one will reign in a kingdom of love and righteousness?

Have we not reason, perhaps, to fear that on us will fall the sorrowing look of our master while he says the fatal words: "Depart from Me ye that work iniquity. Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these ye did it not to Me."

But I do not want to close my sermon ... sincerely and honestly as I know how. How you can make what seems to me selfish and careless indifference tally with your sincere wish to live righteously I do not see. But unless you see a way which I do not I feel sure that it has been with you rather a matter of carelessness than of intentional selfishness.

For in spite of what I have said and contradictory as it may seem, still this is true of our town. There never was a place that at heart felt more badly at the sight of suffering. Most of you have suffered and most would give their right hand to save even the humblest person from going through the valley of affliction. Anyone who knows the heart of this town knows that to be true. What ever its apparent indifference and apparent selfishness comes through being self-centered almost through necessity. Where our people see, they most gladly help.

Let us then pray God for the gift of open eyes, kindly eyes, that we may realize the deep need there is that we should be more wise, more generous, more thoughtful in our work and in our pleasure.

"Prayer for the Wounded Ruler"

At the First Baptist church yesterday morning the Reverend Dr. Edward Braislin delivered a magnificent discourse before a large congregation. The reverend doctor took as his subject "Prayer for the Wounded Ruler" and his text ... as follows:

"Turn again and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people, thus saith the Lord the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold I will heal thee."

Two kings in the prime of life and in the height of power stand face to face with death. Death has come with terrible nearness to each of them. To one he has come by the hand of an assassin; to the other he comes in the guise of an oriental plague swift and remorseless. The two kings are Sennacherib of Assyria and Hezekiah of Judah. One is breathing his last in the temple of Nineveh, the other in his royal palace in Jerusalem. A few weeks ago these kings were arrayed in battle against each other—death ... comes to the victor and to the vanquished—to him who fought on heaven's side and to him who fought against him. Good ... does not hold death away and evil cannot resist him.

But there is a striking difference between the God fearing and the God defying king. Behind the one is a nation of prayer-loving and law-loving people ... zeal in behalf of morality and religion. What of prose the godliness there is in Israel is largely the result of Hezekiah's reform and of his sublime faith and courage. On the other hand behind Sennacherib is a reckless and lawless people lacking in respect for law ... without fever ... royal family ... index of the tone of a nation, hate and murder plan and execute and two sons are attempting a father's life. The natural results of these two national states are revealed in the narrative. Sennacherib lies in sinfulness and dread. Hezekiah's life is prolonged upon the earnest prayers of king and prophet and people.

We are invited to the deathbed of Hezekiah. Note for a moment the condition of Judah. It was a time of peace after years of religious revival after long apostasy and of returning commercial and agricultural prosperity. The air is full of hope and promise. The one man to whom the people owe more than to any other and upon whose skill and character they depend like children upon a father is at death's very door. Will God spare his life? Everything seems against it. The malady is usually fatal and medical skill gives no hope. More appalling far, a voice is heard from the Hebrews' heaven. It speaks to Isaiah the prophet: Say to Hezekiah thus saith the Lord, set thine house in order for thou shalt die and not live. That awful declaration was more fatal to Hebrew hopes than were the opinions of surgeons, and as the royal runners went out over the land there was carried to city and village and hamlet a message of doom and far away to ... and Tyre and Egypt and Damascus heard in the course of days that the good king Hezekiah must die. Not nature alone but God had declared it.

And yet, despite learned opinion, despite the decree of God Hezekiah lived on. One, two, three days the people waited in awful suspense. On the third day the glad tidings spread from the palace fast and far: The king will live and he did live for 15 years.

Into the circumstances of this recovery let us look for a moment.

First, it seems to involve a change in the purpose of God. In the first verse of the chapter we read "Thus saith the Lord, set thine house in order, thou shalt die and not live." In the fifth verse of the same chapter we read "Thus saith the Lord, behold I will heal thee." Did God change his mind? It sounds very like it. Nor is this the only scripture in which God is represented as moved to reconsider some former decision. For example in the sixth chapter of Genesis. And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth. It grieved him at his heart. Again upon the prayer of Moses for the people who had worshipped a golden calf God repented of the evil which he thought to do unto his people. That language such as this should be applied to the all knowing and all wise God has troubled not a few in all ages. We are helped somewhat by remembering that even God's decrees may be seen as all else may be seen from different points of view. A mountain summit is a fixed quantity, but as I climb the mountain side many a lesser height seems to me until I have surmounted it the ultimate view ... realm where the infinite watches the evolution of his full leaved will unfolding from world to world, there is no change actual or possible. God in himself changes not. But looking up on God as we see him through the mists of human tears and within the refractions of our daily light he does change in feelings and actions. He is capable of surprise and indignation and anger, he rebukes, he counterwards, he repents—changes his mind. We must also remember that we know little of the infinite capacities of God. He is too large for our measuring lines, too complex for our explanations. God is a real father and among the other infinities within him are the infinities of a perfect fatherhood in which care for passing pain and for the agonies of temporal sorrow and loss is a real quantity. In the statement that God so loved the world that he gave his son there is hid more than the solemn ever fathomed or human love ever imagined of partnership in man's earthly stress and mortal peril.

So it comes to pass that Hezekiah is healed in answer to prayer. God's purpose was changed in response to human request. Thus saith the Lord the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I will heal thee. Observe here several things for example how watchful is God for human prayer. He was not asleep or on a journey or too busy to receive at once the king's supplication. We are bidden to watch unto prayer, but that is because he watches for our prayers. Note also how ... careless of his own reputation—reckless of it if you please. He said and I would have said. It will not look well to change my mind. God's only care was for reasons and the good of his creature king. God has done many things for man's sake ... lived humiliation. Even made himself of no reputation for your salvation and mine. And see how radical was this change of God's purpose. He shall die—that was one statement. I will heal him—that was the other statement. You cannot make them mean the same thing. Now I believe in the invariability of law just as I believe in that first statement. Nature's laws are commands of God. And I believe in the efficacy of prayer in changing nature's laws just as I believe in that second declaration. You ask me if showers of rain are not the work of local disturbances of the atmosphere determined by laws fixed from eternity and I answer certainly. Is it worth while to pray for rain? Was it worth while to pray for the recovery of Hezekiah? If I wanted rain I should go to God and ask for it, believing that no laws were so immutable as to be the masters of my Father who made them and who in making them decreed that they should be forever his servants and as servants only will be by him forever honored. Otherwise our Lord was mistaken when he said Ask and ye shall receive—imagining that there was some connection between the asking and the receiving.

Two days ago amidst the loving plaudits of thousands and enshrined in the veneration and affection of 70,000,000 more the ruler of a greater nation than was ever the Assyrian or the Jew, was stricken down by the Judas of modern civilization, the spirit of anarchy. And today in the silent chamber of a citizen attended by gentle nurses and anxious physicians and watched over by the love and solicitude of the civilized world the chief of this great people faces death as Hezekiah faced it. He is not king or emperor. For him we have no visible throne or crown. His family have no titles, his sons no rights of succession. He is but a citizen ruling because we have asked him to rule with only the power conferred upon him by our suffrage. He is simply a tender son, a faithful father, a dutiful husband, a distinguished statesman, a blameless American, a rare gentleman, a peerless man. For none of these qualities would even anarchy slay him. His crime is that he is our president—yours and mine. For that crime anarchy has no pardon. And you and I permit the avowed anarchist and the propagandist of anarchy to walk our streets unmolested. Anarchy is worse than treason. It is treason against civilization, against mankind and is more dangerous than the wild beasts whom we drive to their lairs and exterminate. No avowed anarchist should be at liberty in any nation. He should be driven to the company of savages, the nearest to his ideal of government, but the worst of whom are better than he and would repudiate him.

Did any one read without emotion that story of the waiting lady who like the wife of the common laborer, watched from the window the coming of her husband? Was not he safe who had a whole nation for his body guard? But when are we ever safe to the hearts that love us? It grew dark and he did not come. Six o'clock, the workman's hour, and she did not hear his step. Seven, and she knew something must be wrong. She knew that no affairs of state, no popularity however boisterous would prevent the home coming at eventide of this loyal home loving man. She knew him. And when they told her the explanation was adequate. They said she was calm. That is a prerogative of moral greatness. She turned her soul to God and his was turned so already. You may be sure that no two hearts in all this wide republic are at this very moment when a whole nation is in ... magistrate, no two hearts are more intently dependent upon God than are William McKinley and his wife, American husband and wife, America's president and the first lady of the land. It is character that links the greatest to the humblest Christian character. And it is prayer that shapes so far as human agency does shape it the careers of men and of nations. Not only the life of the president hangs suspended today upon a great people's prayers, the prayers of those who have prayer capacity, but the lives of all and the careers of all and the rank of this union among the nations of the earth depend upon the relation of the many to the God and Father of all. And may God spare our president's life.

These Things Influence an Employer.

Managers of large institutions and business houses tell us that they reject a great many applications from young boys and young men because of badly spelled and carelessly written letters. The handwriting and style of a letter are reliable indications of the character of the writer. A negligent letter with careless sentences and inaccurate expressions indicates an indifferent mind. The structure of the sentences shows the texture of the mind which uses them. As a rule a neatly written letter with well-constructed sentences containing concise and pointed expressions indicates a careful and systematic mind. A loose-jointed letter shows carelessness in the choice of words to express a thought and signifies a loosely constructed mind which would ... These may appear to be small things, but trifles make perfection.

An employer is influenced most by the little things in an application for a position. The little remarks dropped, the appearance, the dress, the collars, the cuffs, the nails and the hair—all of these which seem trifles have proved stumbling blocks to the advancement of many a youth. A careless expression in conversation, the use of slang, a failure to look the superintendent or manager in the eye when talking with him, forgetfulness in removing one's hat, holding a cigarette, even an indication of the use of tobacco or the sign of some other bad habit, gruffness, lack of politeness and the hundred other seeming trifles have barred the progress of many a youth.

Learning to spell correctly, to write a ... legible hand, to write a letter without ... and in good terse English will form a very important stepping stone in the career of a youth.—(Orison Swett Marden in September Success.

THE COUNCIL AND THE SEVEN LAKES.

AT THE MEETING of the council this evening the most important matter that it has had to deal with for some time will come up for final decision The city's option on the Seven Lakes reservoir site will expire by limitation today and an effort will be made to use this as the argument for forcing through a deal which ought to receive more thorough consideration than it has yet had before the city is committed to it.

The purchase price for the reservoir site as approved by the citizens sub-committee, is $60 000 and the amount of money required to complete the reservoir and to connect it with the present water system is variously estimated at from $300 000 to $500 000 The importance of the matter should be measured by the latter figures rather than by the original purchase price

The Gazette knows of no reason why the city's interests will be grievously imperiled even if this option does expire without action taken. The purchase of this reservoir site does not and cannot add anything to the amount of water the city has a right to use. That is determined absolutely by our water rights and priorities, both as regards the water taken from the running streams in times of scarcity and that taken for storage in times of flood No other city by the purchase of Seven Lakes can claim any priority over the water rights we now possess nor can such a purchaser diminish by a drop the measure of the water we are now entitled to use That purchaser could only acquire and our city if a purchaser could only acquire such storage rights as pertain to the Seven Lakes reservoir by virtue of its filing as a reservoir and so far as the Gazette is aware no investigation has been made to determine what those rights are But on the other hand, if the reservoir sites now owned by the city, and unimproved, remain in that condition, we shall undoubtedly shortly lose whatever storage rights are possessed by the city in them. Neither Cripple Creek nor any other city of the Cripple Creek district is going to pay $60 000 for the Seven Lakes and with still less reason is Pueblo likely to do so while if any one of them should be so extremely foolish as to buy this reservoir site it is entirely probable that within a few years Colorado Springs could buy it from that city at a lower rate than we are now asked for it, though in the meantime we should have received conclusive proof that we had no profitable use for its ownership

Whatever may have been the motives that have inspired the course of any other paper for or against this purchase the Gazette has desired and sought to serve only the welfare and best interests of the people The successive drops in price first from $100 000 to $85 000 and afterwards from $85 000 to $60 000 afford conclusive proof of the assertion that extravagant commissions were expected and that a large margin was available for subsidies or actual bribery

It was the opinion of nearly every member of the sub committee that the price asked is even now too high and the only reason why the report was signed as it was is because the option expires today and the sub-committee was unwilling to take the risk of letting someone else buy it

The Gazette believes that with the water rights the city already possesses this fear is unnecessary The Seven Lakes reservoir site is undoubtedly worth more to Colorado Springs than it could possibly be to anyone else though it is very doubtful whether it is worth anything at all to Colorado Springs

The Gazette is very firmly of the opinion therefore that the city council ought not to buy the Seven Lakes reservoir site until such a time as its purchase is recommended by competent and unprejudiced experts who have carefully examined the question of priority both for current use and for storage as well as the engineering problems of the proposed plan

In any event the council should not attempt to authorize any issue of bonds or to complete any contract for this purchase without having received the approval of the taxpayers

The language of the statute is very explicit It is to be found on page 419 of the Session Laws of 1899

The city council of cities and board of trustees of towns shall have power to purchase or erect water works gas works or electric light works or to authorize the erection of the same by others but no such works shall be erected or authorized until a majority of the voters of the city or town who are taxpayers under the law voting on the question at a general or special election by vote approve the same

This law be it observed was passed in 1899 and was not in force at the time when the council issued the bonds for the Strickler tunnel

But it is claimed that this section applies only to the first or initiatory step for the establishment of water works and that the first step taken the council thereafter may proceed to vote any amount of bonds for extensions Such an idea is preposterous. The council might secure from the taxpayers a bond issue of $10 000 to construct a pipe line or to purchase one already built and then proceed to mortgage the property of the taxpayers for millions of dollars for extensions The plain intent and purpose of the law is to give the taxpayers the right to say what burdens shall be placed upon them and to prevent extravagance or hasty judgment on the part of a council from inflicting permanent injury upon the town or city It was for this reason unquestionably that the law of 1899 removed the exception specially noted in the session laws of 1881 which permitted councils to create a debt for water supply

With such excellent grounds for the conviction that the consent of the taxpayers is necessary before the Seven Lakes can be bought it is sure that any attempt on the part of the council to proceed to the creation of such a debt would be met with an appeal to the court from some taxpayer who would not permit his property to bear the burden of a debt of half a million dollars more or less for the construction of a part of our water works system whose usefulness or necessity had not been fully demonstrated

But in any event and whatever the law may be found to be the council certainly should not undertake to purchase this property without the approval of the taxpayers. It will certainly cause no more delay and expense to have the matter settled at the approaching general election than it would to fight a suit in the courts And besides that if the proposition is a good one if the reservoir site is worth the money and the city is able to get the water that cannot be stored elsewhere more cheaply and these facts are certified to the taxpayers by competent and disinterested authority there need not be the slightest fear that the taxpayers of Colorado Springs will not approve this addition to the city water system

The council cannot afford to put itself in the attitude of fearing to trust the wisdom of the people upon so important a matter as this. Neither can the members afford to act hastily or recklessly in any purchase of water or reservoir rights.

THE PREVENTION OF CRIME

THE dastardly attack upon President McKinley brings out again in striking form a truth that receives daily illustration The punishment of crime is and must be forever inadequate as a compensation to the victim or others who suffer from it.

No possibility of torture that the human mind can conceive is adequate [illegible] injury done to the people of this country by the wretch who has assassinated the president whom the nation honors and loves.

But what is true in this case is equally true in others The physical sufferings of the murderer can never compensate no matter how much they may be prolonged or intensified for the life he has ended and the agony and and suffering he has entailed upon those who are deprived of their parent or husband or friend

In those crimes, too for which American mobs vainly seek an adequate punishment in the tortures of fire the suffering of the criminal does not lessen in any way or to the slightest degree the proportions of his foul deed

All such events whether in the case of the president or of the individual lead inevitably to the conclusion that the proper remedy for crime is prevention and not punishment

Not to any degree however slight, would we abate the punishment that law prescribes for the criminal The sickly sentimentality that regards the assassin as a victim to be pitied as a prey to his own degeneracy or the unfortunate object of inherited instincts towards [illegible]

The murderer should not be turned loose to prey again upon the next object of his wrath the insane degenerate or anarchist should not be turned loose to prey upon the community But the time for the commencement of the restraint of his liberty should be before and not after he has prepared a victim for sacrifice to a false notion of individual rights

It ought not be possible in a civilized community for a man to continue to breed in his brain for years the festering germs of hatred and lust to be known and feared of his neighbors as a dangerous man to avow openly views that strike at the very foundations of our social existence and are utterly inconsistent with the foundations of our material welfare to go from one prison pen to another as a scholar takes his grades at school, and finally to glorify himself in his own eyes and those of his vicious associates by some deed of such atrocious villiany as to draw to himself the attention of the entire nation

If half the effort now given to an ineffectual attempt adequately to punish crime were expended in quenching the sources of crime and in its prevention we would much less frequently be called upon to lament over possibilities of human degeneracy or to mourn the loss of those who can illy be spared from our national or personal circles

To teach the truth that society has rights that are superior to the assumed rights of human degenerates it may be necessary that presidents should die and the fair name of our states be indelibly stained with the records of lynchings but great and terrible as the price may be it is not too great if from it comes the knowledge [illegible] development of criminals.

The number of candidates for offices in the Republican party this fall indicates that the time for leading a forlorn hope is past and that the chances for the success of the Republican ticket are good Even the tri party opposition concedes that it is only a question of time until the people will retire them to oblivion While some of them still have hope that the time has not yet come others concede that they are doomed if the Republicans put up the right men The Republicans not only of Weld county but in almost all the counties of the state are very sanguine that they will win out this fall There is a sentiment abroad that it is time we had a change Whenever the people get that idea into their heads the party in power is doomed The idea is very prevalent at present and we believe it will be more so as November draws nigh. This district would be in pretty bad circumstances with all the railroads entering it tied up under one management and be obliged to pay the rates they would be in position to demand We want competition here in railroad rates and must have them—(Victor Times

The outlook for Republican victory in the coming county election is bright and becoming better daily The scandals and [illegible] characterized the fusion administration of affairs in Colorado the past few years have disgusted decent voters with that tripartite aggregation and the Republicans have an excellent opportunity for success if they will be true to the traditions of the party and to the best interests of the people Candidates must be selected who will draw votes to the ticket—not repel them Fortunately the Republican party of Gunnison county is not much afflicted with the professional politician therefore there will be no trouble on that score but good judgment must be exercised in the choice of candidates in order that the full party strength and more may be polled There are a large number of good men active and strong Republicans, men who stand high in the county who can be placed on the ticket.—(Crested Butte Pilot

OPEN PARLIAMENT

Mr Rouse's Position

To the Editor of the Gazette

Your article in this morning's issue (Sept 8) which was headed Rouse and Frost on the Water Report in the main represented what I said but it had an undercurrent which tended to place me in the position of opposing said report Now if I had opposed or had not been in sympathy with that report in its main propositions I should have refused to affix my signature thereto I did object to the price at which the Seven Lakes proposition is held I also favored the incorporation of a clause looking to the purchase of other systems

I favored the report basing my conclusions upon three very important reasons as follows First—I recognize the absolute and generally admitted necessity of increasing our storage capacity to meet [illegible] the present water system should be as fully protected against encroachments and diversions of supply as is possible and third in order to forever settle the vexatious and ever recurring question of more water Realizing the importance of these three reasons I was impelled to accept and sign the report which I should have favored more heartily had it incorporated the two objections mentioned above

Furthermore, if it were possible to defer action on the pending options without endangering our chances of securing the same I should favor the policy of obtaining these dam sites by condemnation proceedings which method is used successfully by all corporations having the right of eminent domain under similar circumstances

The committee of ten made its report after investigation and due deliberation and just because I could not have all of my ideas incorporated therein is not a sufficient reason why I should refuse to sign the same or should attempt a minority report The other members of that committee are equally as honest and capable as myself and are equally able to endure criticism or commendation as the case may be Respectfully

He was locked in the county jail for a second time, despite the protests of Manager Marucchi and others at the hotel who believed he was innocent. After being in jail for several days Peterson was released under bail.

Not long ago Dr. Ferguson telephoned from Denver that he was convinced that the boy was guilty and asked the bondsmen to surrender the boy. This was done and for the third time Peterson went to prison. At the instigation of the Denver authorities an information was filed in the district court against the prisoner. Last week friends again came to his rescue and he was released under bail.

The district attorney then began a personal investigation of the alleged case against Peterson and was soon convinced that there was not a jot of evidence. The lad was completely vindicated. It is said that clews which have been found point to others who are being shadowed.

Mr. Black will ask the court to discharge Peterson from custody. The boy will leave Colorado Springs, going to his former home in St. Louis.

During the evening the Gazette telephone was in almost constant use by those anxious to learn the latest. The clubs of the city were kept informed and many private parties called up from time to time and were told the news as it was received.

Yesterday's bulletins were all very favorable. The late dispatches last night were of a more cheerful nature than any received before that time. The general trend of the case since the assassination has been for the better. The danger is not yet over and it will take at least 24 hours to preclude the possibility of peritonitis while the most conservative physicians say it will be 36 hours before the danger of peritonitis will be over.

The bulletins today will be read with eagerness as there is pretty sure to be a noticeable change one way or the other today.

SEVEN LAKES NOT NEEDED

Mr. George A. Taff Says City Already Controls Sufficient Reservoir Sites.

Mr. George A. Taff returned yesterday evening from a trip to the neighborhood of the Seven Lakes and Lake Moraine.

"You may use my name as authority for this statement," said Mr. Taff, "that all the water now available in Beaver creek for use by the city, and that would be stored in the Seven Lakes reservoir in case that property were purchased by the city, can be brought over the divide and stored in the Lake Moraine basin. This would include laying the 20-inch pipe belonging to the city and now lying on the ground, and the cost of preparing the basin for holding the water. The cost might vary a thousand dollars more or less from the figure named, but not more."

This was by no means the first trip Mr. Taff has made to that district, but he went up yesterday for the purpose of verifying his former calculations.

Mr. Taff is a hydraulic, mechanical and electrical engineer of high standing, and is now a resident of this city. Before coming here he held a responsible position with the Stanley Electric company of Pittsfield, Mass., one of the three largest electrical companies in the country, and has built seven large electrical plants in various parts of the country. A large part of his work has been in connection with the development of water supply for power purposes.

Mr. Taff's statement signifies that the city has no need to pay $60,000 for the Seven Lakes reservoir site and to involve itself in an additional expense of some $100,000 for the reason that the city already controls a reservoir site in the Lake Moraine basin that can be made available for holding 2,000,000,000 gallons or as much as the proposed Seven Lakes reservoir, at a cost not to exceed $150,000.

Such a statement coming from such a source is at least worth investigation, and constitutes one more reason in addition to many others why the council should not hasten to buy a property for which, possibly, they have no need or use.

Parks for Tenement Children.

To the children of the tenement a park means play. They are slow to appreciate the aesthetic values of trees, grass, or landscape gardening, and make the lives of the policemen who do miserable. I met two little girls one day, each holding a baby in her arms, gazing through the fence around one of the small triangle parks down-town; beautiful examples I thought of what nature studies in the school can do; but when I asked one of them whether they were ever allowed to go inside, she hitched up the baby and said: "No, it ain't a park, it's grass."

I know it is all wrong to agree with her notion of what a park should be; we ought to be thankful we have any parks at all, but it is hard not to sympathize with the grass and more with the little girl when you see the youngsters squatting on the asphalt fringe of a park while so much good play space is held sacred to the ponderous, dusty-uniformed official of the department of parks with his paper-jabbing stick.

What to do with the children in their play times is a question that bothers mothers all over New York; the mother up-town does not escape it. Her children parade with the nurse to the Mall in Central park and have a very proper, stupid time of it until the country season comes. The mother in the tenement has to let her children take to the street, where they fit their fun to their opportunities. "Gee," said one of my little up-town friends when we were walking through Rivington street, "wouldn't Marie Jabber if she had to look after those kids?" —(From "The Poor in Summer," by Robert Alston Stevenson, in the September Scribner's.

MUCH RAIN, BUT LITTLE DAMAGE DONE

Colorado Springs was visited by another heavy rain storm yesterday. The storm started early in the day and was worst during the afternoon when the rain fell with great force.

So far as could be learned up to a late hour last night no damage of any great consequence had been done in this city. The rain fell very heavily in Colorado City and Manitou but did not do much harm. There was some lightning during the evening but no damage was done by it according to the best information that could be obtained.

The Rock Island had a washout east of this city and the train from the east was delayed several hours. The D. & R. G. reported trains slightly late on account of the storm. The Santa Fe reported all trains on time. The storm seems to have been very general in this section of the state.

BEGINS FOURTH YEAR AT M. E. CHURCH SOUTH

Rev. E. Evans Carrington met with a cordial greeting from his congregation yesterday when he began the labors of his fourth year at the Southern Methodist church.

Mr. Carrington preached yesterday morning on "The Disciplinary Value of Law," and based his remarks upon the tragedy which occurred at Buffalo, paying high tribute to the character of the president. Just before the sermon he called upon his congregation to join with him in special prayer in behalf of the stricken president and his wife.

PROFESSIONAL OPINIONS ON THE MINING STOCK MARKET

BONBRIGHT & CO.'S MARKET LETTER

6th September, 1901.

The decided decline of the past week which affected in particular a number of the market leaders, has been largely due to rumors of impending labor trouble at Cripple Creek. We have refrained from giving any currency to these rumors, which have been in the air for several weeks past, since we have from the start been assured by a number of the largest employers of labor in the district and by others competent to form an opinion, that the possibility of trouble was very remote and hence we have felt that harm rather than good would result from their publication. These rumors originated in the issuance some weeks ago of a circular by the Miners union of the Cripple Creek district, calling upon all miners to "join the union before September 15, or be considered scabs and treated as such." By many this was considered no pressing trouble and a probable strike. These fears have now been dissipated by a published letter of the president of the executive board of the Western Federation of Miners in the Cripple Creek district, in which it is stated in effect, that the matter in controversy does not affect the mine owners, against whom the union has no grievance. There seems therefore no likelihood of labor troubles at Cripple Creek at this time, at least as an outcome of the matter which has excited the fears now entertained.

The August output for the Cripple Creek district has been variously estimated at from $2,100,000 to $2,320,000. No increase over the previous month was gratifying and the production for the month is one of the largest in the history of the camp. Accepting the most conservative estimate of the production the record is indeed a remarkable one and would have been materially increased had the railroads and mills been able to handle all of the ore mined. The heavy production of the Portland and Independence together with the greatly increased output of the Elkton and Wild Horse, was responsible for the excellent showing for the month. The gross tonnage was about 50,000 tons.

SPECIAL MARKET REPORT BY J. McK. FERRIDAY & CO.

Saturday, September 7, 1901.

Yesterday's national calamity at Buffalo gave warrant for the belief that today's market would be weaker. This expectation was not realized, however, and prices held very firm although trading was light. In our opinion the market will not be seriously affected even if the worst comes, as there seems to be a general feeling of confidence in those who are at present second in authority in the national administration.

The outlook for the market is far from gloomy. The camp is making a magnificent production record, the mines are in splendid physical condition, there is little likelihood, at this writing, of a labor agitation and capital is apparently gradually coming back for investment in legitimate mining enterprises. The Cripple Creek field is wonderfully attractive by reason of the camp's proved stability and richness, the lower workings of the big mines having already demonstrated the permanency of the ore bodies and their extent and richness at great depth.

Eclipse Consolidated has been an interesting figure during the week, having sold down to 1¾ in the face of a very favorable consolidation with the Sunset company. Eclipse, owning only 104 acres, gets 2,114,000 shares of the consolidated stock out of a capitalization of 3,000,000 and the Sunset company, owning about 318 acres, gets 1,885,000 shares of the new stock, leaving 500,000 shares in the treasury. But Eclipse has a dept of between $20,000 and $25,000 and it is understood the 125,000 over and above the 1,000,000 which Eclipse gets, is given to the Eclipse people to exchange for which they are to take care of the debt. This places a higher figure on Eclipse than the stock has been selling for on the open market, and the decline in price can only be accounted for by the likelihood of certain developments, which may come at any day but which are as yet rather too indefinite and uncertain to be given publicity. The new company will probably be controlled by the Richards-Keener-Costello-Nichols combination. Mr. Richards has by many years demonstrated his faith in Cripple Creek in a most substantial manner, and particularly his faith in Eclipse. He has "stayed with it" from the very inception of the company, and is a man in whom stockholders can have the utmost reliance, and he has excellent associates.

Gold Dollar holds very strong in persistent inside buying, but the daily marketing of stock goes merrily on and someone, whoever it may be, is converting considerable Gold Dollar stock into cash. We understand a liberal reward will be paid to the person who will disclose the source from which this purchase of Gold Dollar stock is coming. It is now said that Gold Dollar is successfully "cornered" and if that be the case it will be interesting to note what eventual disposition will be made of the 2,000,000 shares for which the company is capitalized.

Gold Knob has unwarrantably advanced to 8, but the company's $40,000 debt remains unpaid. The outlook for the company can hardly be called bright, and we see no reason why the stock should not decline materially.

Molly Dwyer's affairs will be given consideration at the annual meeting next Wednesday, and the Foley-Mattocks people will probably control the company. We consider 7 cents high for the stock under present conditions and believe there will be a sharp decline within thirty days. Pointer, as expected, has passed its dividend and the stock has declined to 7. We understand however, that the property is looking very well and that there is still a large quantity of good ore in the mine. Information on Pointer consists largely of guesses. Isabella, the eccentric, after selling down to 43¾, reacted sharply to 52 today and remains a mystery. This stock affords good speculative fun for the insiders and ample grief and anxiety for the outsiders.

On the belief that one and possibly two dividends would be passed, Doctor Jack Pot sold down to 59, but promptly reacted to 62 and closed fairly strong today at 61. With only about $70,000 in the treasury and a pay-roll to meet, the passing of the dividend seems wholly reasonable. There are a number of things "in the air" and it requires to be seen whether Doctor-Jack Pot will settle down to a substantial business basis or continue to be one of the most manipulated stocks on the board. Lower prices will probably prevail during the next thirty days.

There was a rush for Gold Hill treasury stock this week and when the supply was exhausted the price immediately advanced from 1½ to 1¾. We still consider the stock a purchase at the advanced figure. The company will at once pay its few remaining debts and will probably have enough left in the treasury to start work upon the properties.

H. H. BARBEE'S MARKET LETTER

Figures for the production of the Cripple Creek mines and the dividends paid by mining companies during August have now been made up and the month is found to have been a very prosperous one. The district shipped 58,000 tons of ore, of which the gross value was $2,170,000. The total amount of dividends fell somewhat short of the usual monthly record owing to the fact that the quarterly dividends of the large companies did not fall due in August, but the sum of $144,650 was reached, which is very creditable.

The market during the first week in September has not been very satisfactory. The opening days showed strength in some stocks, but owing to the probability that the Isabella and Doctor-Jack Pot companies will not pay dividends this month these stocks are weak, and their weakness more or less affected the whole market. Another cause which has contributed somewhat toward the weakness is the apprehension felt in anticipation of a labor strike in Cripple Creek. There have been the most direct assurances, however, that there will be no strike. The union is desirous of getting all miners to join, but it has been announced on the authority of the president that the matter will not be taken to the mines for settlement for the union has no grievance against the mining companies. The market will probably be a little unsteady, however, until the apprehension is entirely quieted.

DELANY & DELANY'S MARKET LETTER

September 7, 1901.

If one is inclined to buy, it were best to do so when prices are soft, but the softness of values this last week suited us too well. We have been inclined to indulge ourselves in a few figures of speech relative to the rule of Isabella, and whether our frothings were headed or not, the stock declined and El Paso advanced. It is to be regretted that the affection for "Izy" is not of a more enduring and constant nature, as she no more than assumes the hauteur manner of the stiff necked aristocrat, than her inconstant admirers desert her like the scramble of bugs off a hot pan.

As the return of autumnal weather brings to mind the youthful pranks of by-gone days, so may the speculator and investor return to their old love, and weld together the broken ties of yore. Many are the dead stocks that might be resurrected and made to ring with the rustle of returning life and enthusiasm. Must one always be malice and doggedly sit with indifference and see opportunities glide by for the mere lack of spirit, resultant from one or two profitless investments. Adjust yourself to changed conditions, and if perchance you pinned your faith to some P. T. M. and Q. stock (Put Your Money In and Quit) try one you know is a dividend payer, or is shooting out ore as fast as steam, brawn and compressed air will do it. Such a one is the El Paso. This may read like a patent medicine advertisement, but what is money but a "cure all" remedy for the many ills of humanity. We may at some near future time call attention to a few good cheap stocks which will be quick profit makers.

DRILLING FOR HOT WATER AT PAGOSA SPRINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

Pagosa Springs, Colo., Sept. 7.—A new industry has been started in Pagosa Springs in the nature of drilling for hot water. While the oil companies of Archuleta county are busy drilling for oil, Mr. F. A. Collins, cashier of the First bank at Pagosa Springs, has turned his attention to drilling for hot water, and hopes to open up the source of the wonderful Pagosa hot springs and to have the water on the town side of the river as well as at the main spring which is removed some distance from the town across the San Juan river. For this purpose he has taken a lease on 315 front feet on Main street, on land belonging to the town of Pagosa Springs. The drilling operations are under way in an old crater which is supposed to be the original source of the springs.

The deposit from the Pagosa hot springs covers over 130 acres of ground and there are evidences of the original crater of the spring having been at one time located on the north side of the river in the townsite. The present flow of hot water is entirely on the south side of the river on the 80 acres owned by the hotel company. The citizens of the town are anxious to open the source of the waters on this side of the river and thus create competition in the hotel and bathing business which they believe will materially improve the hotel and bathing accommodations of the place. From the old crater where the drilling is started a stream of carbonic acid gas is constantly flowing. This lends color to the theory that hot water will be encountered when a sufficient depth is reached.

Mr. Collins is backed by public sentiment and is receiving encouragement from the citizens in general. It is generally believed that he will be successful in his project in opening the source of the health giving waters and that the town will soon possess hotel accommodations and bathing facilities commensurate with the fame of the waters and the beautiful surrounding country.

DEMAND FOR BLACK HILLS TIN

(Special Correspondence.)

Custer, N. D., Sept. 7.—Unless all signs fail, there is to be a lively demand this fall for properties containing tin values. Letters are being received here by old mining men asking for information on the tin resources and a number of capitalists and experts have been roaming the country for several days past, looking at promising tin properties. It is stated on the best authority that the American Tin Plate company has had an expert in the field around Harney peak for two weeks, looking over some of the old mining [illegible] investigating the reason why the Harney Peak Tin company failed in producing commercial tin. Two of the old companies, organized 10 years ago at the time of the boom that the Harney Peak company gave the Black hills tin, have just been resurrected and they will be at work very soon opening up their properties. They are the Glendale and the Gertie Tin companies, with properties near Keystone and Hill City. Several thousand acres of ground have been bonded by the expert, who is here representing the American Tin Plate company. The old Harney Peak company still owns several thousand acres, but it is not likely that for some time to come, anything will be done in the way of further development of their claims. The company has let some of the ground go back to the government and this has been picked up by prospectors. The expert in the employ of the American Tin Plate company states that he is of the opinion that there is a large amount of ground in the Southern hills that will be rich enough in tin ore to work at a profit. He [illegible] ledges that will go better than 3 per cent. tin, which makes a proposition equal to gold ore running $15 to $18 per ton. There will not likely be another tin excitement, such as the one created by the Harney Peak Tin company, 10 years ago, for the companies that are now beginning to operate here are conservative and they propose to open up the ore in paying quantities before they build mills. Tin is in ever increasing demand and the high price makes it profitable to find new fields. The Black hills is the most promising place in the world at the present [illegible]

[illegible] Mining company, with headquarters at Hill City, in the Black hills, is about to erect a mill with 100 tons capacity, to treat ore that was blocked out years ago, the ore running about three and one-half per cent. tin to the ton.

OMAHA MINING COMPANY

(Special Correspondence.)

Pagosa Springs, Sept. 7. General Manager Black of the Omaha Mining company reports that work is progressing rapidly on the 50-ton Parker rotary stamp mill, which the company is erecting on its claims near Elwood. The company owns the Tolono, Omaha and Henrietta claims in the southern portion of Mineral county, 17 miles due north of Pagosa Springs. The vein is a mammoth one, averaging 18 feet in width running [illegible] the three claims, the [illegible] gold and it also carries a cerusite of lead, and is free milling and concentrating. The walls on each side of this great dike are granite and are clearly defined. The claims are worked by a tunnel and as the mountain is very precipitous, a great depth can be attained.

Mr. Black organized the Omaha Mining company last December with a capital of 100,000 shares, one-half of which was placed in the treasury. He has been very successful in selling the treasury stock and has realized enough money to complete his mill. While the proposition is a close one Mr. Black and his associates feel that with economical management the mine will pay handsomely, and they expect to be shipping concentrates in the early fall.

CLEAR CREEK COUNTY.

R. C. Vidler's new enterprise, the Lucania tunnel, seems to be deserving of more than passing notice and it has been mentioned to us as one of the important mining undertakings of the past few years. For two or three weeks past there have been quite a number of important mining men from Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek here and from them we learn that they have been looking over the Lucania tunnel, among other things, and they one and all speak in no measured terms of the possibilities of the undertaking.

The Lucania tunnel has long been looked upon as the "great point" from which the many veins of Quartz hill can be cut quicker and deeper than from any other. We find also that the people at the back of the enterprise are abundantly able to carry it through and from present indications it will be a friendly race between the Lucania and the Newhouse to arrive under the great California veins, as the start is now about a fair one, the Lucania having about two miles less distance to go, yet obtaining the same and perhaps a still greater depth. The Lucania will cut into Gilpin county in about 5,500 feet and obtain the extraordinary perpendicular depth from the surface of 2,600 feet, while on the dip of the vein in many cases will reach fully 3,000 feet.

The Crown Point and Virginia vein, according to Mr. Knowles, will be cut [illegible] but as that will give the Crown Point people an additional 2,000 feet of stoping ground from what they now have, they are quite anxious to welcome the new enterprise and wish it success.

The veins owned by Lucania people are 25 in number and are the extensions of some of the best in the country, viz.: The Kinda, the U. P., the Specie Payment, the Champion, the Bourbon, on this side of the divide, besides extensions of these veins. Many more are included and are called the Teutonic, Majestic, Etruria, etc. The Kinda vein is cut at 1,100 feet and in about 2,000 feet then comes a rapid succession the U. P., the Specie Payment, just sold for $625,000, the Champion, the Pappoose, the President Hayes, the Crown Point and Virginia and the Emerson. When it cuts under the Knickerbocker tunnel, 1,350 feet deeper, and from here through the famous Quartz hill, cutting the Topeka at 2,700 feet. So that outside of the wonderful possibilities of this enterprise as a producer of valuable mineral from its own veins, its promise as a tunnel and transportation company is enormous and not second even to the famous Newhouse, which has proven and is still proving itself to be such an unlimited success [illegible] from Colorado Springs [illegible]

The performance given by the West minstrels this year is said to contain much variety, much humor and to be very astonishing in its several big olio features. "To make the people laugh" has been the one aim of Mr. West in selecting his artists, and with this object paramount he has surrounded himself with many of the leading burnt-cork comedians of America, prominent among whom are Billy Van, McMahon and King, N. S. Carr, F. H. Hammond and others of note. The strong characteristic of the West performances has always been the high quality of its vocal features. This season Mr. West promises the best singing company he has ever presented. His vocalists are famous on both sides of the Atlantic, and it is no exaggeration to state that never before in the history of minstrelsy has such a high salaried corps of vocalists been introduced by a minstrel manager. They include Manuel Romain, America's leading minstrel tenor; Clement Stuart, England's greatest minstrel and concert hall tenor; Georgie Jones, a youthful barytone of whom great things are predicted; Wilson N. Miller, a basso of prominence; F. H. Hammond, a favorite American singer, and a large chorus of splendid voices.

To no ... the wonderful success of Jean ... in this country at least, due more than to the late Henry E. Abbey. He had faith in Jean, and backed that faith with more liberal remuneration than Mr. de Reszke had received from any previous manager. Abbey's judgment of the tenor was correct, and he became a success. When Henry E. Abbey passed away a few short years ago he left his wife in straightened circumstances. Mrs. Abbey, as it may be remembered, was, before she was married, Miss Florence Girard, one of the most interesting, bright and intelligent actresses of the English or American stage. Well, charming as she was as an actress, she was even more delightful as a hostess. She entertained superbly at her home, and there was no guest more constant in his visits or more welcome to the feast than Jean de Reszke. A friendship thus matured one would imagine would be of greater duration than a few short years. The king of managers dead, the widow of the king came upon hard lines. The friends who flocked round her hospitable table, who voiced their empty flatteries and smiled their hollow acknowledgements when she was in the hey-day of success forgot all when misfortune, loss of fortune and financial distress fell upon the poor little widow who was struggling to maintain herself honorably in the British metropolis. In an hour of unusually hard financial straights she bethought of the friends was crowded about her hospitable board and who were honored by being invited there. One of these was Jean de Reszke, the illustrious tenor. She applied to him for a small loan—only thirty pounds. Yes! He replied by sending ten pounds, and he did so in such ungracious manner that it was promptly returned. I could enlarge on this. God help those who have to appeal to people of short memories. Mr. Richardson, who had the tale from a gentleman who had just returned from ... words: "All London is talking about the matter now, but my information doesn't reach me in any roundabout way. Mrs. Abbey herself told me the story."

This Sarah-Romeo-Bernhardt, Maud-Juliet-Adams proposed tour crops out every now and then so as to keep the proposed tour well before this too gullible American public. "The people like to be humbugged," was a favorite expression of Barnum. And he was right then; but I thought with advancing years we learned to know better. It seems not, if reports speak truly, and I don't know what to think about it. Perhaps it may. The story runs that Miss Ray Rockman, a graduate of the Boucicault school of acting, a bright, intelligent American girl, is the English instructor of the divine Sarah. Miss Rockman is at Belle Isle, the country place of the great French actress, and she is the Bernhardt's instructress. The only language allowed at Belle Isle is English—French is, for the nonce, "nit." Well, if we must have this French-American "Romeo and Juliet," I am glad to learn that Madame Sarah is taking such pains over the words of Romeo.

One of the most industrious and hard-working actresses here at present is Verona Jarbeau, preparing for her forthcoming equestrian and spectacular production of "Mazeppa." It is to have its first presentation in Philadelphia. Much money is being expended in giving the play a magnificent stage setting. Miss Jarbeau will be surrounded with a good company. She has secured the fiery, untamed milk-white steed on which she is to be lashed in scanty attire and sent up the runs into the forest of Tartary. Beyond the fiery "Mazeppa" is a thrilling play when well presented. Brilliant, fascinating and beautiful women have played the character in days gone by. It is to be hoped that Miss Jarbeau will give American theater-goers a Mazeppa equal to the greatest in the past. Au revoir.

From Railroad Folks:

Mr. Adam W. Brown, section foreman of a railroad, living at Carp Lake, Mich., writes:

Having been a sufferer from stomach trouble for the past eight years and being cured by Ripans Tabules, I feel it my duty to speak of the great benefit I have received from that medicine. Have been a section foreman for the past fourteen years. For eight years I have suffered dreadfully from stomach trouble, have taken medicine from five different doctors, but all to no avail. I had given up hope of ever being cured. Last fall I got so bad that I had to give up my position altogether. I had an awful gnawing pain in my stomach, every day after each meal, for about three hours, when I would turn deathly sick and then I would vomit. After which I would feel easier until the next meal. I kept on this way until I fell away in flesh from 190 lbs. to 115 pounds, and then I got so weak that I could scarcely walk around. About this time a friend told my wife about Ripans Tabules, and she got a box from the drug store and wanted me to try them. I did so, but did not have any hope of their helping me. I did not notice any change until I had taken about half the box, when I began to feel easier after meals. The gnawing got less and I did not get sick and vomit as before. My appetite came back and I began to feel brighter. I took six boxes of Ripans Tabules in all, which did me more good than all the doctors' medicine. I think there is nothing like Ripans Tabules for stomach trouble, as I gained up to my old weight. I felt splendid until a short time ago, when I began to have headaches quite often. I sent for more Ripans and I have been getting better.

In support of her husband's testimony, Mrs. Adam W. Brown writes as follows: "I really believe had it not been for Ripans Tabules my husband would not have been with us to-day. He was confined to his bed and the doctor could not help him. Another doctor said he had consumption. His stomach trouble affected his heart so that at times I thought he was surely dying. I recommend Ripans Tabules to all sufferers from stomach trouble."

Mr. Chas. E. Clymer, a Camden, N. J., railroad man, writes: I was troubled with the heartburn after eating and have been taking Ripans Tabules and they have given me great relief. I hold a position as foreman on a section of the Pennsylvania Railroad. I have to stoop over a great deal and before I began taking Ripans Tabules when I would be at my work after eating I would feel as if my meals were coming up. I had taken a good many kinds of medicines but did not find relief from them, but Ripans Tabules have done the work. I tell everybody. They have done me a lot of good. I have about thirty men under me and I believe every man takes them now. They would not believe they were any good until they saw what they had done for me. Chas. E. Clymer, Pavonia Sta., Camden, N. J.

ROYAL LIMITED
NEW YORK AND WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. B. P. M—bury, conductor on the Royal Limited, between New York and Washington, D. C., living at 107 8th Street, N. E., Washington, D. C., writes under date of March 27th, 1901:

"I have been on the railroad for ten years and have tried all kinds of medicine for habitual constipation until a friend gave me some Ripans Tabules. Since then I have always carried a package in my pocket for use. I also give many a tabule to persons I find in distress. Ripans Tabules I find always a great remedy, not only for constipation but also for indigestion and headaches. I give this testimonial for the welfare of others. I always have a package with me on the train and my wife keeps them in the house."

There is scarcely any condition of ill-health that is not benefited by the occasional use of a R.I.P.A.N.S Tabule, and the price, ten for 5 cents, does not bar them from any home or justify any one in enduring ills that are easily cured. A family bottle containing 150 tabules is sold for 60 cents. For children the chocolate coated sort, 72 for 25 cents, are recommended. For sale by druggists.

Another Legend of the Peak

How the Columbine Came.

BY BONNIE GINGER.

They were sitting, Marget and he, under a tree on the terrace, and it was early morning. There were other trees around them, where the shade was denser, but his preference had been for this one because the sunlight intruded here in little flitting patches, and he loved to watch its caresses on her hair.

The world was busy all around them, but here under the trees the prattle of the young day came to them as an indistinct and distant murmur. They were in a silence of seclusion, not solitude. Only now and then through the stillness fell the exquisite plaintiveness of the singing meadow lark.

"I am a pilgrim, you know," smiled Marget—"not to Canterbury, but to Colorado. And as I don't want to talk, will you tell me a tale?"

"What about?" he smiled back at her. "A postmaid in a lavender dress, with dark green hair and a yellow hat?"

She pulled the branches from before his face, so that he might see as she did.

"Oh no. Tell me about prairies and purple mountains and a rosy peak—and all under a blue Colorado sky."

"Excuse me—the mountains are not purple—nobody knows really just what they are. Well, then, something about the Long Ago."

He flung himself back on the grass, while Marget leaned contentedly against the tree trunk, with her eyes fixed where the [illegible] of gray around the big old mountains—the glorious mountains she was learning to love so much.

He began his legend.

You see it now—the Peak—a monument that God has left there of his wonderful works in the creative days of the past. Ah, and what a [illegible]! Sometimes, as now in the early freshness of the day, while it is summer yet, the old Peak looks to me like some fine laughing hero, with all his friends crowding closely, but demonstrative, about him; and then an eternal youth seems to have touched them all with its beautiful mystery. But when the day grows, and the flush of the morning has yielded to a graver hour, then it is that the transformation of age is visible—and it is as though you looked instead at some great king on his high throne, an empire at his feet, and on his brow the traces of the struggle that have taught him how to rule. And on the lofty front of that Peak you read, besides, the history of a striving when history was not. You see, though you can not decipher them, the records of a gigantic past, when the Titans lived the splendid age allotted to them.

And then came a past, not so remote, yet long before the regency of the red man, and long, long before the coming of the white man, his heir. Of these, the red man was not a lover of the mountains, but he was not destructive. He hunted in them, but he did not despoil them. It is the white man who has ever been the rebel to the mountains. Where has his hastening foot not dared to tread? Where has his [illegible] golden heart from the hillsides? And is there a valley where he has not set up his screech-god of progress, to drive from their haunts with strident noises all the gentle echoes that once laughed and knew not the white man's usurpation.

No, the red man was not gold-greedy. The mighty Manitou once lived here, long ago, and taught the lessons of simple nature to his stoic savages. But the mighty Manitou is gone and gone too is all the past, with its mysteries and struggles and days of peace, and the great mountain is alone with the present. And the clamoring present is but an indignity.

But when it is night, and his empire is sleeping, the Great Mountain who never sleeps, looks through the stars and his face is so calm in the moonlight, that I believe he is looking into the white man's future—a future triumphant in moderation, simplicity and strength.

Ah, but the legend.

(It was in that past that I told you was before the red man's time, and I had almost forgotten it, Marget, in telling you the thoughts which the Peak so often forces upon me.)

It was the time, too, of the gods upon Olympus, and the nymphs in the groves. The Old World was not so very old then, and the New World was but a baby. Yet in its infancy it showed the vigor of gathering power. But it was very quiet now—the pause of growing ages was upon it. How charming was this quiet, too! The rivers went unhindered to the sea; the forests nurtured, but did not conceal, the gentle [illegible] that [illegible].

And the prairie!—the lazy prairie lay on its back and laughed at the sun, and stretched, and rolled and rolled through a fragrance of flowers, and tumbled itself in a heap where the mountains are. And the mountains laughed, too, and the birds sang, the sun flashed—why! the world was young.

Surely the prairie would have been the loveliest spot in nature had there been no mountains. But the mountains are the grandest thing on earth, and behind them they guard the valleys, the choicest of all.

In these valleys lived the nymphs of the young world. Such beauty is not now, nor had its equal then. Fair and innocent were the nymphs of Greece, but these so fair, so innocent—Apollo had not dared to importune a Daphne here. Here they wandered in bands of happy singing vagrants, running with the companions of nymphs in all lands—the deer. They drank from the pools under the spray of the waterfalls. The bee supplied them with his honey, all the year—for it was always summer then. And—artless beings! They had a sweet and good religion—they worshipped the Good Maker twice a day. Their altars were on the tops of the mountains. And in the morning they heaped them with flushing roses and at even with goldenrod. And the queen's altar was the Peak—the Father of Mountains.

Once a year—and it may have been in June—they held a festive day of flowers. The plain was blazing with bloom then, and they gathered their pretty arms full—to crown the Father of Mountains with gold at sunset. That day was the only one of the year on which they might leave their valleys and come down on to [illegible] without a prohibition.

It was this way: The Children of the East—the sons of the Ocean—would come thus far sometimes, and they would gaze in curiosity upon the high hills; but they were an innocent, happy race and took no thought to venture. Yet should they once set eyes upon the wood nymphs, there would be an end to the good old times. They would love the nymphs and carry them away to be the nymphs of the ocean. Then the mountains would grow barren and bleak!

However, if by chance the maidens were spied by these wanderers, they must flee. If caught, they must not speak. A single word would break the charm of safety. Then they would tell all—where they lived and where the queen lived—and "Then," said the queen, who addressed them thus solemnly at this event, to keep them in prudence, "Then they find me, and to the hero and the leader of them I give my heart." (Here the queen blushed, but continued bravely): "I cannot help it; we shall love each other, and he will take us all away, he and his companions, unless I have strength to do—ah, you know what!" Every maid grew pale (but) "I shall cry the cry three times, and at the first we shall be given strength to flee—at the second you—you shall—the hills will never see you run and sing again, though you shall bloom on their slopes and keep them young forever; but at the third, I—" poor steadfast queen! "I shall be as you for one short moment—and then I shall neither breathe nor bloom nor live again!"

This was the only day, too, on which the nymphs cried. They always cried at this and wondered if any were in their midst who could come to break the saving charm of silence.

Lovely, indeed, the sight when these sweet beings tripped amongst the flowers of the prairie, their sunny hair, their mist-like garments and their burdens of blossoms making jeweled rainbows over the grass. Once they came thus, and the queen with them. Her hair was like gold; she wore royal purple and at every step little white flowers bloomed where her foot had fallen. She had never come down with them before. And as she looked at the blue sky and the hills, she suddenly put out her arms and called, "My home! My mountains!" and fled back alone, with the others coming slowly and reluctantly after.

A few of the maidens had lingered awhile in the afternoon, weaving chains of the long grasses and singing together. Presently they would be flitting homeward, and that night at sunset the Father of Mountains would wear his crown. See, the sun is creeping now into the west. But stay, a little while—they will weave [illegible] just a while—

"Holla-a! Away-y-! Hol-l-a-a-a-a!" Too late, little nymphs! You can spring to your feet and clutch your hearts, and sob at every bound, but you cannot get away. See, the butterflies dart round and round you in frightened clouds. The Children of the East are swift—oh, they have caught you! Not one to run home and [illegible] the queen! And how the captors laugh in honest glee!

One cries, and now another, "Who are you? Who are you? Speak to us!" All the nymphs are silent. Not an answer.

They will not speak, but they may look. The eyes of the Sons of Ocean are frank and gay. See! one plucks a wounded butterfly from the shoulder of her he holds so gently and sets it free and smiles. And now only the whispering of the grass is heard. How still!

He that was so tender with the butterfly takes his hand slowly from the maiden's arm. But his eyes are grave [illegible] She can not turn her own away. He draws a long breath—then, with a wild gesture—oh, little weakling! she cries, "We are the Woodnymphs of the Mountains! Come with us!"

The butterflies that circled around them fell like white petals at their feet. But the crowd of chattering nymphs and laughing youths came over the prairie and into the hills to find the queen and her kingdom in the valleys—the valleys where the sun was fading fast. The leader of the youths was crying, "I shall find the queen—my queen! and we shall all go into the last of the East together!"

"Yes, each with his queen," said another, and a cheer went up.

Rollicking, they reached the grove [illegible] maidens, telling them how to lift the chain that should crown the Father of Mountains at sunset. "Up, now, for it is coming the time, and we must climb to the altar and lay the offering there. To Him who has blessed us!" She turned.

Her hair was like gold, her robe was of purple. Her face was like marble carved in fear.

Long the young hero stood there, and he learned what love is. And she hung her head and sobbed.

Under the quaking trees stood groups of motionless nymphs. But she who had broken the silence on the plain, who had brought the wanderers here—her heart was ice within her bosom. Too late she kept the silence, and could not speak. But now the queen has spoken. She gives one cry, "My King!" and the hero has her hands in his.

Even while he leans toward her, she has suddenly wrenched herself away. There she stands, one hand on high, for a brief second as she cries, so loud and clear that every thicket gets the sound—"The sacrifice!" and she has fled! The spell is broken, the nymphs have turned and darted away, terror driving them on. Up to the high groves they fly, the swift pursuers after.

But up the sides of the Father of Mountains sprang the queen; at every step the white snowdrops burst into life and laid a starry path behind her. And now he sees her—and now she is gone again—higher, faster! He sobs as he bounds over the terrible crags. The valley grows dim below them. And now she stops again, panting in the thicket of little trees. As he nears her she seems to him like a golden star in the darkness [illegible] second she holds her arms toward him and her eyes with tears spring into his own as he looks—and she cries to him: "My King!"—and then that fearful cry again pierces the air. "The sacrifice!" and it falls, like a lamentation, below.

And below, at that cry, a thousand nymphs vanished like the fading of lightning into sight—and where the pursuers groped about and called in vain, were only [illegible] with snow hearts.

Now the queen is nearing the top, always like a golden star, with the flowers bursting under her steps. And he staggers onward, his breath coming in foamy sobs. And now she is there, and for the last time she looks, her gaze into his as he, gasping, tries to reach her. Once more she holds her arms to him and whispers, "My King!" And for the third time she stands with hands upraised to heaven—a heaven that burns on her yellow hair like gold—and, even while he stretches forth his arms in agony to her, she whispers, "The sacrifice!" and falls. And he too sinks down beside her, lies in her yellow hair. Oh, Father of Mountains, thou hast thy golden crown!

When he looked up, long after, the moonlight was on the rocks and the night was deeper below him than it was with the stars around. His hand no longer lay among yellow tresses, but where she had fallen was a circle of snowdrops, and one purple flower on a long stem, with dew-like tears in its heart of gold. He bent and kissed it, and it shivered and drooped, for everywhere were snowdrops—snowdrops white, like frost.

Down the mountain came the youth, his heart broken. In the valley his comrades met him [illegible] Queen!" but none could answer. Under their feet were purple flowers; like stars, on tall stems. Some drooped and many lay crushed under the feet of the searchers.

You can see them in June, up in the aspen groves on the slopes. The stragglers out in the open are pale. Those hidden in the denseness are rich in hue. Those that are safe in the hearts of the highest thickets are royal purple. They all have hearts of gold.

The Woman Who Says "Smart" Things—An Incident

If there is one woman who will not linger, lone and forlorn, on the doorstep when we all line up before the turnstiles of heaven, it will be the sweet, gentle lady who always has at her tongue's end some extemporaneous speech in defense of mankind.

Women, as a rule, are heartless, particularly when they are criticising some other woman, and the most heartless of all women are those who are sheltered from the rough usage which contact with the work-a-day world enforces.

Only the other day this was forcibly brought to my mind by a circumstance that was related to me by one of the sweetest little women in the world. It seems that she had two young girls visiting her, daughters of school mates of hers. The girls had just been graduated from Ann Arbor and had spent their vacation traveling over the country before settling down to their labors. They were fine, bright, healthy American girls—such as reach up high to make their mark in the world.

They were guests of their friend at the Antlers. Upon this particular afternoon, the three of them donned their natty, short walking skirts, and suitably attired, they started to do the canons. As they walked through the rotunda upon their return, they encountered a fashionably attired young woman and her escort.

Standing stone still in front of them the girl elevated her eyebrows, and looking them over from head to foot, as if she were scrutinizing some specimen at a museum, she exclaimed:

"Why, this is our evening out. We're playing grand ladies tonight."

Then they both laughed significantly at their witty shot.

The woman flushed up in pained embarrassment that her guests should be so coarsely insulted, but the girls good humoredly laughed it off.

"Even had the girls been servants, enjoying their evening out, it would have been much unkinder," charitably commented the little woman.

I hope the girl who made such a stagger at wit sees this and maybe it will put a thought into her head.

As I am just in a penitent mood, induced possibly by the weather or by a stray reflection that at some time or other I might have been just as thoughtless, I am going to indulge in a short sermonette that nine chances to one reflects the true inwardness in the mind of every woman who will be honest with herself.

We women are a hard-hearted, bitter, voiced lot, despite our smiles and laughter. Now, honor bright, aren't we?

There are few of us so good, so unfailing, so honest with ourselves, so truly unerring, that we can with reason criticise the Other Woman. Besides, we never know quite surely but that under the same circumstances we wouldn't have erred just as the Other Woman did. She herself is the only one who thoroughly realizes what a fishnet of circumstances was woven around her. The woman who is always kind knows that "to err is human," and knows, too, that even the best of women and the noblest of men sometimes make mistakes, and they feel keenly the bitter smarts of regret. When the Wise Woman hears that Miss Somebody-or-Other made such a blundering, untactful remark at Mrs. Somebody else's tea party, she only smiles, and tells a little story about some of the awkward things she herself has said or done. But the average, more-or-less-cruel sort of a woman, tiptilts her powdered nose and says that Miss Somebody-or-Other never did have a grain of sense anyway, and that she was always putting her foot in it, and so on. We've all heard her.

"I saw little Miss Brown in the store yesterday, and dear me, her dress did look as if it had been made in the year one," chatters pretty, well-dressed Miss Pert, who never earned a cent in her life and probably couldn't if she tried.

"Yes, I saw Miss Brown, too," says the Sweet Woman. "Her dress didn't look very stylish, but you know she supports her mother, and the poor thing has been sick all summer."

"Have you heard about the Smiths? You know they've only been married a year, and already people say they fight like cats and dogs," is the kind bit of gossip that Miss Know-It-All retails to her friends.

"Tut, tut, that's all nonsense, little woman and you don't want to go about saying such things," says the woman who is always kind. "I'm sure the Smiths get along as nicely and happily as any other young married couple. It's all fub-dub to say that there aren't occasional raindrops or even squalls on the sea of matrimony everywhere. But I'm sure the Smiths kiss and make up, like the sensible people that they are, and only love each other all the more when fair weather does come."

If there were more kind women in the world the [illegible] tattle of gossip would have fewer willing listeners and the sum total of human happiness would be increased.

Without question, much misery in the world is caused by the thoughtless, reckless retailing of stray gossip. A little story is repeated with additions and embellishments, and after a while, the magnified story gains credence [illegible] alas. It is too true that women are tale-bearers against themselves.

Then again, women are too apt to take more acquaintances for "real friends," and it is such a temptation to them to let the flood gates loose and to pour out their troubles like water from a sprinkling pot. There is such a longing for sympathy in the human soul that that foolish part of a woman's make-up dubbed a heart for want of a better name—seeks consolation everlastingly. Don't tell your troubles at every street corner. First thing you know you'll receive only ridicule where you asked for sympathy.

If we were all beyond temptation; if we were all always kind and wise, of course we wouldn't be women at all. We'd be up there with the angels, sitting on fleece-tipped, snowy clouds, chanting anthems to the larks and nightingales and meditating upon the rampant folly of this jolly, sad old world of ours.

But after all, there are some kind, gentle women, and some women who are kind and gentle sometimes.

Here's to both of them! And may they have long life that happiness may increase for the rest of the world.

Miss Prue.

WILD STEER OF SOUTH AMERICA

Specimen Head at Antlers Hotel Prompts a Story.

RESTLESS HERDS ON PLAINS

They Are Not Often Disturbed Except by Other Animals and Men After Hides.

Probably everyone who has been at the Antlers hotel has observed and admired the fine specimen of a steer head that hangs above the entrance door. The head is unlike that of the American or Texas steer in many ways. First of all, the look of powerful strength in the short thick neck, the broad space between the eyes and the immense long, almost straight horns, all perhaps mildly suggested in the Texas steer, are here accentuated to such a degree as is only to be found in the wild species.

The head is from a wild steer of South America. Although there are hundreds of thousands of these cattle roaming the illimitable llanos of Venezuela and pampas of Argentine, it is extremely hazardous to capture them and hence such a head as the one at the Antlers has considerable value. Gustave Stainsky, the taxidermist who mounted the head, received it from an adventuresome huntsman, a friend of his, and his account of the chase is full of interest. Mr. Stainsky is a connoisseur and curio collector of all kinds and the animals which he has mounted are to be found in all parts of the world. Only a year or so ago, Prof. Stainsky mounted a fine specimen of an elk head for the emperor of Germany.

Speaking of the wild cattle of South America, Mr. Stainsky said:

"These cattle are as abundant there as the buffalo was 50 or a 100 years ago. The limitless surface of the llanos is covered with a luxuriant vegetation, which in wet spots here and there is overgrown with immense palms which rise out of the sea of grass like great tall giants.

"Here, these immense herds of cattle wander throughout most of the year, undisturbed by man. It is only when the stealthy jaguar sneaks through the tall grass after the calves to get a tender mouthful that the grazing herds are frightened. Then, again, the fearless gauchos, with their never-failing lassos, ride through the herds after the fierce wild cat, and throwing their lassos over the head of the jaguar, strangle it. But the hot battle frightens away the herds, and to find them again costs many days of labor.

"When, however, the short rainy season is over, the grass and moisture are all dried up. As the heat increases, the cattle become maddened by thirst. But in spite of this, the herd does not dare to quench its thirst from the ponds because experience has taught it to fear the boa-constrictor, the alligator, electric eel and jaguar, which abound near the ponds and streams.

"As soon as a moist breeze is borne to them from miles away, the tortured and enraged beasts stampede to the refreshing water and those animals that have not been killed in the wild stampede, hurl themselves into the water. The leaders are usually trampled to death by the thousands that follow. The bellowing and fighting created by the animals is like the rumble of thunder and can be heard for many miles around. When such a wild herd comes to any inhabitated village, it causes havoc with all kinds of life. Everything in its path is trampled to death. In this way the river beds of the llanos country annually bury thousands of cattle.

"Great shiploads of horns and hides are exported from this region. The cattle are driven into immense stockades and their end is sudden. The beef has no value whatever. The cattle are slaughtered as ruthlessly as were the buffaloes on this continent."

Under the Black Flag.

Heralds of laggard morning, the mockers cheerily sang;
Dawn broke red as we saddled, but never a trumpet rang;
We straggled out of the oak wood, we swept the meadow-rail;
The turnpike heard us laughing, where stoutest hearts might quail.
Something fluttered above us against the dawn-red sky,
Flittered, fluttered, whispered: "Men, it is do—and die!"
Light as the clouds of morning, black as the soul of sin,
But none blenched as he saw it—it was ours to die, and win.

Our only drum was the hoof-beats. Ho! ho! Their rataplan!
'Twas the merriest mad drumming ere thrilled the soul of man!
The mockers timed the cadence as never a fife might shrill;
We splashed through wimpling waters, we rode straight up the hill;
Horse and man, we were ready to the end of blood and breath;
The gun-locks whined like wounded gnomes, the sabers snarled in sheath;
The dawn-red died to ashes even the heavens grew pale,
As we rode beneath Death's colors, to meet Death's leaden hail.

Ready men on the hill-side, as ready as we to die,
Roared us a fiery welcome, as they saw the black flag fly;
A thin and ragged legion, we rode at their massed array.
Of the great red god of battles ne'er watched a bloodier fray!
From crown to chin we cleft them, in mad, electric rush;
Again I feel the saber slash, I smell the new blood gush;
Again I hear the death-cries, the bullet's fretful whine.
The drum-beats falling silent, as we cleft the burly line;
Never a man cried quarter—still, still the death-flag flew,
Its staff as red as the reddest blood, and dripping bloody dew.
We had sworn it should not falter while one had strength to stand
[illegible]
dying hand to hand.
Five of the ragged legion brought off the flag—alive.
But they cleared the hill—old, gray, and bent, I alone am left of five.

—Martha McCulloch-Williams, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for September.

Toilet Articles

are important too. You'd sooner have these pure preparations and high grade articles at the same price as poorer ones, wouldn't you?

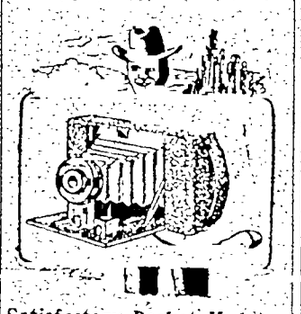

Brushes for instance, good tooth brushes, good hair brushes, good flesh brushes, good every kind of brushes with even bristles that won't pull out.

DRY CLIMATE CREAM is pure. We know because we make it. Compounded particularly for use in this trying atmosphere.

PEACHES

After reviewing the market we have reason to believe that the time to put up fruit, peaches for the winter is NOW!

There is nothing to show that they will ever be cheaper than we are selling them now and they are certainly of a grade that without doubt pleases buyers.

We are making a specialty of Grand Junction fruit and when you examine its condition generally, its luscious flavor, its ripeness and firmness, you will admit it is

GOOD

We have no competition when it comes to selling good fruit.
